Philadelphia Drug Rehab Expands: Pennsylvania Recovery Center Launches New PHP & IOP Programs in Center City

July 16, 2024

Schuylkill Township, Pennsylvania - July 16, 2024 -
Pennsylvania Recovery Center has announced that it will open a new Partial Hospitalization Program (PHP) and Intensive Outpatient Program (IOP) in Center City Philadelphia. These new services aim to provide more accessible and flexible treatment options for people struggling with addiction, extending the center's reach beyond its original Phoenixville location. Co-owner and former NHL player Chris Therien leads these new programs, dedicated to offering comprehensive care and support for those affected by substance use disorders.

The Partial Hospitalization Program (PHP) offers an intensive treatment approach similar to inpatient care but with the flexibility of outpatient services. It's designed for individuals who need a structured treatment environment without 24-hour supervision. The program includes different therapies, group sessions, and holistic activities to address both physical and mental aspects of addiction. This helps individuals stabilize their recovery as they transition back into daily life.

Brandt Norton, CEO of Pennsylvania Recovery Center, remarked, "Opening our facility in Center City

Philadelphia is a significant step in making life-saving addiction treatment more accessible. Our new PHP and IOP services aim to meet the unique needs of those in urban environments, offering flexible and comprehensive care options."

The Intensive Outpatient Program (IOP) is another key part of the new Philadelphia facility. This program provides intensive treatment while allowing individuals to keep up with their daily responsibilities, such as work or school. The IOP program includes individual therapy, group sessions, and skill-building activities. With its flexible schedule, the program helps individuals balance their recovery journey with day-to-day life, making it an attractive option for those who might find inpatient treatment too restrictive.

"As someone who has experienced the far-reaching effects of addiction, I am committed to making a difference in our community," said Chris Therien, a former Philadelphia Flyers player and co-owner of Pennsylvania Recovery Center. "Our new programs in Center City aim to provide the critical support people need to recover and rebuild their lives."

Alongside the PHP and IOP programs, the new facility also offers intervention services. Families and loved ones can get help from an interventionist to encourage someone resistant to seeking help. These professionals work closely with families to create a tailored intervention plan, increasing the likelihood of the individual entering treatment.

The center also provides detoxification services, customized care plans, and aftercare support to cover each stage of recovery. The "Bulletproof Recovery" alumni program continues to offer support to those who have completed their treatment, helping them maintain their sobriety.

Individuals seeking more information or looking for a "detox near me" can find comprehensive details on Pennsylvania Recovery Center's website. They offer free drug and alcohol assessments to help determine the most appropriate treatment plan and provide medical provider referrals as needed, ensuring a continuum of care from detoxification to outpatient services.

"By expanding our services to Center City, we're providing greater accessibility to critical treatments like our IOP program, which can be a game-changer for individuals needing flexible yet intensive care," added Brandt Norton.

Pennsylvania Recovery Center accepts various insurance plans, providing in-network coverage with several providers including Geisinger, Cigna, Aetna, Blue Cross Blue Shield, United Healthcare, and Allied Trades. This makes treatment more affordable and accessible for many individuals seeking help.

Strategically located, the facility serves residents of Philadelphia and the surrounding areas, providing a range of crucial services to help individuals and their families navigate the path to recovery. For more information on their services and how to begin the journey toward recovery, individuals can explore the options available on Pennsylvania Recovery Center's website, including the critical intervention services offered by an experienced interventionist.
