Sport Resource Group has announced a growing interest in GaGa ball, especially in schools, parks, and camps. They offer a durable plastic version of their commercial GaGa Ball Pit, which is safer and lasts longer than wooden pits. Wooden pits can cause splinters and are more vulnerable to weather damage.

GaGa ball is often seen as a gentler form of dodgeball. Played in an octagonal pit, it has quickly become popular among young people. The game is fast-paced and can include many participants, making it an ideal activity for places like camps and schools. As the game's popularity increases, so does the need for safe and reliable GaGa Ball Pits.

Chris Guertin from Sport Resource Group said, "We're thrilled to see the growing interest in GaGa ball. Our design focuses on safety and durability, which makes our pits a great choice for both indoor and outdoor use. We've used our experience to create a product that stands up over time and offers the best possible user experience."

Sport Resource Group's GaGa Ball Pits come in four common sizes: Mega (36' x 36') for up to 44 kids, Official (26' x 26') for up to 28 kids, Junior (20' x 22') for up to 20 kids, and Mini (15' x 18') for up to 12 kids. These sizes can be customized in 2-foot increments to fit specific needs.

Safety and easy setup are key features of these pits. The plastic material is splinter-free and stands up to wear and tear from the weather. Unlike wooden pits, they are safer and easier to clean, making them the preferred choice for frequent use.

Sport Resource Group's GaGa Ball Pits are also designed for quick assembly and disassembly. Two people can set up a pit in under ten minutes, making it convenient for both temporary events and permanent installations in playgrounds. This flexibility makes the pits suitable for many activities, from PE classes to summer camps.

The company offers customization options for their pits. Customers can choose from a variety of colors to match their specific needs, adding a personal touch. This feature is popular among customers who want equipment that matches their brand or theme.

Sport Resource Group also provides support materials, including installation videos and tips on their website. These resources help customers set up and use their GaGa Ball Pits efficiently. Additionally, testimonials from previous clients offer insights into the quality and durability of the pits.

"We understand the needs of schools, camps, and other institutions where children are active and busy all day long," added Guertin. "Our goal is to offer equipment that provides both safety and longevity. Our GaGa Ball Pits do just that, and we're delighted to contribute to the engaging activities of kids across various settings."

For organizations wanting to upgrade their playground or recreational areas, Sport Resource Group offers a safe and effective solution with their durable plastic GaGa Ball Pits. Customers can conveniently order online the products they need directly through their website.
