WHITE PLAINS, NY - Brian Mittman, Esq., founding partner of Markhoff & Mittman, P.C., has released a statement regarding the recent accident and remarkable recovery of Sal Forte, a tower crane technician who suffered severe injuries while working in White Plains, New York.

Mr. Mittman, drawing on over two decades of experience in workplace injury cases, emphasized the critical importance of workplace safety protocols, especially in high-risk industries like construction.

"Accidents like Mr. Forte's are tragic reminders of the dangers faced by workers every day," Mittman stated. "While we're relieved to hear of his recovery, it's crucial that we use incidents like these to push for stronger safety measures and ensure that workers are properly protected and compensated when accidents do occur."

The attorney praised the swift response of emergency services and the quality of medical care Mr. Forte received, which contributed significantly to his inspiring recovery. However, he also stressed that such incidents underscore the ongoing need for vigilance and improvement in workplace safety practices.

Mittman encouraged all employers in high-risk industries to review and strengthen their safety protocols regularly. He also advised workers to be aware of their rights and the importance of proper training and equipment.

As an advocate for workers' rights and safety, Markhoff & Mittman, P.C. White Plains remains committed to supporting individuals who have suffered workplace injuries and to promoting safer work environments across all industries.
