

Danville Music Expands PRS Guitar Collection in San Francisco Bay Area Store

September 11, 2024

Danville, California - September 11, 2024 -
Danville Music, a well-known musical instrument store in the San Francisco Bay Area, has expanded its collection of PRS guitars, which can be found at https://danvillemusic.com/collections/paul-reed-smith-guitars. This store, which offers a variety of instruments and services, aims to meet the diverse needs of musicians in the community. The new collection includes different models such as the Custom 24, Silver Sky, and McCarty 594, providing more options for local musicians and collectors.

Danville Music has an extensive range of musical instruments for sale. Their selection includes electric and acoustic guitars from brands like Gibson, Fender, and Taylor. Beyond guitars, they also carry basses, amps, effects, drums, ukuleles, band, and orchestra instruments. Customers can find accessories like cases, gig bags, and microphones as well. Adding more PRS guitars enhances their already wide array of offerings.

"The addition of these high-quality PRS guitars to our inventory reflects our commitment to offering musicians the best selection in the region," said Adam Schuman, co-owner of the store. "PRS guitars are known for their craftsmanship and sound quality, and we believe they will resonate well with our customers."

Besides selling instruments, Danville Music offers musical instrument rentals. This service is perfect for musicians who might not be ready to buy yet. The store's website has a dedicated page for rentals, complete with an instrument rental request form to simplify the process. For more information on rentals, those interested can visit their rentals page.

To help musicians improve their skills, Danville Music also provides music lessons. These lessons cater to different skill levels and are available for various instruments. Information about the lessons and the staff can be found on the store's website, making it easy for customers to find what they need. More details about the lessons can be found on their dedicated music lessons page.

Additionally, the store offers repair services. Musicians can get their instruments fixed by professionals, with details about the repair services available on the store's website. This range of services makes Danville Music a one-stop shop for all musical needs. For detailed information about repairs, customers can visit the repairs section on their website.

Cameron Brochier, another co-owner of Danville Music, said, "Our aim is to support musicians in every aspect, from learning and performing to maintaining their instruments. The new PRS guitar models are a valuable addition that aligns with our mission."

The store has an impressive archive of brands and products, with the PRS guitars being a key feature. This supports the store's goal of offering a variety of products that cater to different musical tastes and preferences. With models like the PRS Custom 24 and Silver Sky now available, musicians can explore a wider range of tones and styles.

But Danville Music's collection doesn't stop at guitars. The store also sells bass guitars from respected brands like Fender and Music Man. Their amp selection includes top names such as Mesa Boogie and Milkman. Effects pedals from companies like Strymon and Earthquaker Devices add versatility for musicians looking to shape their sound.

Danville Music goes beyond just selling instruments. They provide a nurturing environment for musicians at all levels. Whether someone is just starting or is an experienced player, the store caters to everyone. This commitment has made Danville Music a trusted name in the Bay Area guitar store community.

The store features several standout PRS guitars on their dedicated PRS guitars page. Customers can browse various models and make informed decisions about their purchases. Detailed information about each guitar model is available, helping customers understand what makes each one unique.

Danville Music remains dedicated to enriching the musical journeys of those they serve. By continually updating their inventory and offering comprehensive services, they strive to meet the evolving needs of musicians. The store's expansion of PRS guitars is part of this ongoing effort.

Musicians and enthusiasts interested in exploring the new collection of PRS guitars or taking advantage of the store's other services can visit Danville Music's website or the Bay Area guitar store location for more information.
