August 30, 2024 -
YONKERS, NY - Attorney Brian Mittman of Markhoff & Mittman, P.C. has released a statement regarding the recent partial building collapse on North Broadway in Yonkers, New York. As a seasoned attorney specializing in workplace injuries, Mittman offers valuable insights into this incident and its broader implications for urban infrastructure and worker safety.

"This incident highlights the potential dangers workers face in aging structures," Mittman stated. "It's crucial for property owners and employers to prioritize regular inspections and necessary repairs to prevent such accidents. Workers have the right to a safe environment, and incidents like these underscore the need for vigilance in enforcing safety standards."

Mittman emphasized the importance of proper building maintenance and the need for cities to balance historic preservation with public safety. He noted that the collapse raises important questions about the state of urban infrastructure in America's aging cities.

"While we're fortunate that only minor injuries were reported in this case, it serves as a wake-up call," Mittman added. "We must ensure that our urban planning and safety protocols keep pace with the challenges posed by older buildings."

As the situation in Yonkers continues to develop, Mittman and the team at Markhoff & Mittman, P.C. remain committed to advocating for workplace safety and protecting the rights of injured workers.
