August 12, 2025 -
NEWBURGH, NY, - In light of a recent construction accident in the Bronx involving an A-frame ladder, Markhoff & Mittman, P.C., a leading workers' compensation and personal injury law firm, has released a statement emphasizing the importance of ladder safety on construction sites.

The incident, which resulted in significant injuries to a construction worker, has prompted Brian Mittman, a prominent work injury attorney at the firm, to share his expertise on the matter.

"Construction work is inherently dangerous, but many accidents, like the one we saw in the Bronx, are preventable," Mittman stated. "Ladder safety might seem straightforward, but it's crucial that workers and employers alike remain vigilant. Proper ladder setup, regular safety training, and adherence to safety guidelines can significantly reduce the risk of falls."

Mittman went on to stress the importance of thorough investigations in such cases: "When an accident does happen, it's essential to investigate thoroughly to determine if there was any negligence or failure to comply with safety standards. Workers have a right to a safe workplace, and when that's compromised, they also have a right to seek compensation for their injuries."

The law firm emphasizes that this incident serves as a stark reminder of the risks associated with A-frame ladders on construction sites. Markhoff & Mittman, P.C. advocates for stricter safety protocols, including regular training sessions, routine inspections of equipment, and clear guidelines for ladder use.
