January 20, 2016

January 20, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Patryk Wezowski is excited to announce that the 'Coaching' movie will be reopening the doors for investors on January 20 when the new trailer for the movie will be launched. Full details are available through the Leap movie website.

Patryk Wezowski himself says: "Our movie is and has been the top crowdfunded European documentary ever on Indiegogo. People love it as much as what we do. The new trailer is spectacular and more investors want to become involved."

The January 20 date has been long awaited, not in the least because it is also the day on which the final title for the 'Coaching' movie will be announced. A lot of buzz and hype have been created about this, as the producers have already agreed on the title but will keep it under wraps until the launch of the trailer. They have simply said that it is a title befitting of the movie itself.

The trailer, meanwhile, will introduce people to the full story and give them a better idea of what it is all about. Interestingly, it became the top crowdfunded movie based solely on vague descriptions, so it is believed that it will continue to hold this position once the full details about the production have been revealed. People are encouraged to contact the film makers for further details and to express an interest in funding it further.

The producers aim to encourage people to achieve real change in the world through the movie. They had previously asked people to already start this wave of change by sharing information about the release through their social media channels, thereby reaching many others. The goal is for 1,000,000 people to completely change their lives through coaching, enabling them, in turn, to change the world.

"It is no secret that the business of coaching is a huge business nowadays," says Patryk Wezowski. "We are an integral part of that, and anyone who invests in our movie after the trailer release will be on their way to changing their lives and the world as a whole."
