

Exciting New Pottery and Painting Classes Debut in Wilmington, NC at Peace and Pottery

September 24, 2024

Wilmington, North Carolina - September 24, 2024 -
Peace and Pottery, a student-owned pottery studio, is happy to announce new and expanded offerings at their Wilmington, North Carolina location. This studio, owned by Brianna Torres, a 21-year-old student at the University of North Carolina Wilmington (UNCW), offers a range of classes and workshops that welcome pottery enthusiasts of all skill levels.

Among Peace and Pottery's popular Pottery Classes For Beginners is the "Beginner 90-Minute Wheel Class," perfect for those new to pottery. This class gives participants hands-on experience with wheel throwing and basic pottery techniques. It's priced at $60 for an hour and a half session.

Brianna Torres, the studio's owner and operator, expressed her vision: "I started Peace and Pottery to share my love for pottery with the community. I also believe in the therapeutic benefits of pottery, which is why I'm so passionate about teaching and creating a positive space for everyone."

The studio also features "Paint Your Own Pottery" sessions. These allow customers to choose from a variety of pre-made pottery pieces and paint them as they like. This can be a great way for both kids and adults to explore their artistic side. These sessions are $5 and last an hour.

For those interested in specialized techniques, Peace and Pottery offers the "Drippy Mug Workshop." Participants get to glaze their own drippy mug, a style that's both popular and visually appealing. This workshop is 90 minutes long and costs $55.

To build a sense of community, the studio offers the "Pottery, Wine, and a Good Time" event. This is aimed at adults who want to enjoy an evening of pottery painting with wine. It's a relaxed and fun way for friends and couples to spend time together. The session costs $10 and lasts an hour.

For those wanting to deepen their pottery skills, Peace and Pottery provides longer-term courses. There's a 3-week wheel course held Fridays from 5-7 pm for $125. The studio also offers two 6-week wheel courses on weekends: one on Saturdays and another on Sundays, both from 5-7 pm and priced at $225. These courses cover everything from wheel centering to trimming, giving participants a comprehensive learning experience.

For those who prefer to learn and create at their own pace, Peace and Pottery also has an online shop. Although it currently doesn't feature any products for sale, it's an option the studio is working to expand.

Brianna Torres uses her understanding of psychology to guide her teaching approach. She's committed to mental health and said, "Pottery is not just about creating something beautiful; it's about finding peace and mindfulness in the process. I'm committed to providing a safe, inspiring, and healing space for everyone who walks through our doors."

Peace and Pottery is located at 200 Willard Street, Wilmington, NC 28401. The studio is open from 2 pm to 5 pm on Thursdays, 11 am to 5 pm on Fridays and Saturdays, and 12 pm to 5 pm on Sundays. For more information or to book a class, you can contact the studio at 910-619-1483 or via email at peaceandpotteryy@gmail.com.

Brianna Torres's passion for pottery and her focus on mental health make Peace and Pottery a special place. Her dedication to her craft and her community highlights the spirit of local entrepreneurship.
