September 26, 2024

September 26, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Bali Exception, a leading real estate consultant in Bali, is delighted to share new investment opportunities brought about by the island's major infrastructure upgrades. These developments include the Light Rail Transit (LRT) system and a significant toll road expansion, making it a great time for investors to check out real estate for sale in Bali by visiting the Bali Exception website.

The Bali Light Rail Transit (LRT) project, often referred to as the Bali Urban Subway, is a major step forward in modernizing the island's transportation system. This project aims to ease traffic congestion by offering a quick and efficient transit option connecting South Bali and Ubud. Scheduled to be completed by 2031, the LRT's construction will occur in four phases. The first two phases will cover key areas, including Ngurah Rai International Airport and Kuta Sentral Parkir. This $20 billion investment is expected to boost property markets along the transit routes, creating more demand in areas that were previously less developed.

Alongside the LRT, the construction of the Gilimanuk-Medewi Toll Road is another significant infrastructure project. Set to start in September 2024, this toll road will stretch nearly 97 kilometers, connecting central Bali to the western regions. Developed through a public-private partnership, this project is valued at around IDR 22.839 trillion and is classified as a national strategic project by Indonesia's Minister for Public Works and Public Housing. The toll road will improve access to numerous villages, making it easier to reach regions where real estate is still developing and offers more affordable options compared to more established markets.

Typhaine, a spokesperson for Bali Exception, spoke about these developments: "The ongoing infrastructure projects are set to change Bali's property market dramatically. Improved connectivity through the LRT and the toll road will open up new areas for development, creating excellent investment opportunities. As a top real estate consultant, we are uniquely positioned to guide investors through these changing markets."
