

Lifeproof Cases Available To Aussie Adventurers

January 12, 2016

January 12, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Sydney AU: Synticate is pleased to announce that the "Lifeproof" iPhone cases are being released to the Australian marketplace. The premium lifeproof iPhone case fits not only the iPhone, but the Samsung Galaxy, tablet, and other mobile devices. The Lifeproof Free case for iPhone 6S Plus is constructed to protect against most of the common pitfalls which affect the performance of mobile devices. The name "Lifeproof" suits the product very well. It protects mobile devices against water, dirt, snow and drops.

The lifeproof case allows mobile device user to enjoy life's adventures such as surfing, skiing hiking or other adventures while staying connected during every damp, muddy and dirty step of the way. Life is meant to be enjoyed and the features of the protective case permit selfies and videos to record all of the activities in the water, forests, deserts and elsewhere.

The new models are waterproof. They are submersible for up to two meters (6.6 feet) for as long as one hour. Dropping an iPhone in a puddle no longer means replacing the damaged phone. Using the premium case means that the mobile device is sealed from dirt and dust. Skiers will appreciate the protection from snow and ice. Winter sports are no longer something that must be avoided, due to the fragility of the mobile device.

Skiers, snowboarders, and sledders can record their activities, without risk to the phones. A fourth protection offered by Lifeproof is security against dropping the phone. The case has been shown to protect against drops from up to two meters (6.6 feet).

Cracked cases, wet interiors, dirt in the circuits and other damage usually means the iPhone is no longer in prime condition. Replacing a phone may take days, and the purchase of a new phone often means losing files on the phone. Instead, the active user can pick an attractive, protective case and take the phone along on each adventure.
