

Lost Coffee Brews Up Change with New Coffee Subscription Service Prioritizing Ethical Sourcing

October 16, 2024

Littleton, Colorado - October 16, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Lost Coffee has launched a new coffee subscription service, perfect for those who love having top-notch blends delivered straight to their doorstep. Since it began in 2010, Lost Coffee has focused on giving customers a premium, sustainable coffee experience. This new service fits right in with their mission by emphasizing ethical sourcing and supporting fair trade farmers and producers.

With Lost Coffee's subscription service, customers can pick a variety of coffee blends, making sure their coffee experience matches their taste. Customers also have the choice of how often they get their shipments, adding some flexibility to their coffee routine. Subscribers can enjoy a selection of different blends, including popular ones like the Flat Black Espresso Blend and Before Dawn Dark Roast. This service is all about making sure one always has fresh, high-quality coffee on hand.

Scott Gaerte, the owner of Lost Coffee, expressed his excitement about the new subscription, saying, "We've always aimed to connect people with exceptional coffee while ensuring the sustainability of our supply chain. With Lost Coffee's subscription service, we're excited to offer our community a way to experience their favorite blends regularly while supporting the producers behind the beans."

Supporting fair trade farmers and producers is a key element of Lost Coffee's business philosophy. By getting beans from farmers who prioritize sustainability, they ensure that financial support reaches everyone involved in production. They also invest in better wages and conditions for farms that are owned and operated by women. This practice not only improves the lives of those who grow the beans but also aids in conserving natural resources.

Scott also spoke about their focus on ethical sourcing, noting, "Every cup of coffee tells a story of dedication and care from all those involved, from farm to cup. Lost Coffee is dedicated to recognizing and rewarding the hard work of our farming partners, ensuring their communities flourish as our business grows."

By subscribing to this service, customers join a community that values both good coffee and good practices. It combines the joy of enjoying excellent brews with the satisfaction of backing sustainable farming and ethical production methods. Lost Coffee's subscription service allows customers to engage with their coffee in a new way, knowing that their choice supports a positive change in coffee-growing communities.

The commitment to support fair trade farmers and producers is a significant part of Lost Coffee's greater mission of ethical business and top-tier products. The subscription service marks a step forward in how people connect with their beloved drinks, providing a convenient and conscientious way to savor consistently high-quality coffee.

For those interested in trying out this new service, Lost Coffee provides more information on their website. The site details the available blends and allows customers to set up their delivery preferences. This service is bent on reshaping how coffee enthusiasts experience their daily cup, mixing taste, convenience, and social responsibility.

Lost Coffee is expanding its presence and influence in the Denver area, with cafes in neighborhoods like Littleton, Aurora, Highlands Ranch, and Castle Rock. These locations serve as local meeting spots where freshly roasted beans turn into expertly made beverages. By moving into the realm of subscription services, Lost Coffee aims to build stronger ties with their customers, offering a taste of their café ambiance at home.

As more people discover this service, Lost Coffee anticipates that it will extend the benefits of their business philosophy even further. The subscription not only makes it easy for coffee lovers to get their preferred blends but also boosts their impact on a more sustainable and fair coffee industry.

Lost Coffee's vision goes beyond just making great drinks; it's about committing to people, communities, and the planet. As they continue this journey, they invite each new subscriber to join them in creating a better and more enjoyable future for everyone involved. To learn more or to get started on one's own coffee journey, visit lostcoffee.com for additional insights and offerings.
