Winnipeg, MB?Wiebe Criminal Defence offers dedicated legal representation for individuals facing serious criminal charges, including sexual interference and assault, in Winnipeg. As one of Winnipeg?s experienced assault lawyers, Wiebe Criminal Defence provides skilled advocacy to achieve the best possible outcomes in these sensitive and complex cases.

Sexual interference, as defined in Section 151 of the Canadian Criminal Code, involves the act of touching, either directly or indirectly, a person under the age of 16 for a sexual purpose. It is considered a serious offence, carrying severe consequences that may include imprisonment, registration on the National Sex Offender Registry, and other restrictions. Facing sexual interference charges can profoundly impact an individual?s personal and professional life.

At Wiebe Criminal Defence, the legal team recognises the complexity of these allegations and the stigma they carry. Public perception often leans toward judgement, but the firm is committed to ensuring that every client is treated fairly under the law. A spokesperson from the firm stated, ?Everyone deserves the right to a fair trial, and we must defend that right, regardless of the charge.?

Legal defence for sexual interference cases requires a detailed understanding of the law and taking into account the specific circumstances surrounding each case. Wiebe Criminal Defence provides a tailored legal strategy, focusing on evidence review, expert witness consultation, and exploring possible defences. One of the key elements of a sexual interference charge is proving intent. The prosecution must demonstrate that the accused had a specific intent to commit the act for a sexual purpose. The firm diligently examines every detail to challenge the prosecution?s claims and uphold the presumption of innocence.

?Facing a sexual interference charge is incredibly stressful, and we are here to offer support and legal guidance,? said the spokesperson. ?We take each case seriously and work diligently to present the strongest possible defence for our clients.?

Wiebe Criminal Defence emphasises that there are potential defences in sexual interference cases, including demonstrating that the accused had no sexual intent or that the touching did not occur as claimed. Another possible defence is the ?honest but mistaken belief in age,? where the accused believed the complainant was old enough to consent. However, this defence only applies if the accused took reasonable steps to verify the complainant?s age.

Bail proceedings are another critical element of the process, especially given the gravity of sexual interference charges. Wiebe Criminal Defence helps clients navigate the bail system, protecting their rights. In many cases, individuals facing these charges may be held in custody until a bail hearing. The legal team works to secure their release by presenting a solid bail plan and addressing any concerns the Crown may raise.

For individuals convicted of sexual interference, the consequences extend beyond prison sentences. Convictions often include mandatory registration on the National Sex Offender Registry, as well as other long-term legal restrictions, such as restrictions on working with children or being in certain public spaces. These penalties can severely limit a person?s employment and social opportunities. Moreover, the impact on personal relationships and reputation can be devastating.

Wiebe Criminal Defence urges anyone facing sexual interference charges to seek legal representation immediately. Early intervention by a skilled criminal lawyer can significantly affect the case outcome.
