New Bandsintown Page Launches for Blues and Americana Artist Ben Killen

October 17, 2024

New York, New York - October 17, 2024 -
Ben Killen, who is making strides in the country blues and Americana music scene, is thrilled to announce the launch of his new Bandsintown page. This platform is designed to be a go-to place for fans to find details on his upcoming shows, project updates, and future releases. Known for his genuine approach and talent for mixing heartfelt lyrics with a soulful blues sound, Killen is ready to forge deeper connections with his listeners.

Drawing from the rich musical heritage of legends like Howlin' Wolf and Muddy Waters, Ben Killen offers fans direct access to his performance schedule through his Bandsintown page. This ensures everyone stays informed about his latest projects and tours. His aim is to build a strong relationship with his fans while highlighting the lively world of modern blues music.

His latest single, "Singing River Blues," captures the heart of his musical journey. The track can be pre-ordered on sites like Bandcamp and reflects his unique blend of authenticity and musical flair. This song was crafted with the help of artist Rusty Zimmerman, who created the original oil painting used for the album cover. Fans can dive into his music by visiting Killen's Bandcamp page at https://benkillen.bandcamp.com.

B.D. Killen, the driving force behind BDKMG's music projects, shared his excitement about the new Bandsintown page. "We're excited to launch this platform. It's an essential part of our plan to bring fans closer to the music and stories that define our musician's artistry. We want this to be an easy way for fans to follow our journey and passion for music," said Killen.

The Bandsintown page goes beyond just listing concert dates. It serves as a comprehensive resource for everything related to Ben Killen. Fans can expect regular updates on his tours, insights into his creative work, and news about upcoming releases. This effort is part of a broader goal to create an open and engaging experience for his audience.

Aside from his music, Killen is also committed to philanthropy, using his platform to push for positive change. Money earned from "Singing River Blues" in its first year will be donated to charity and raise awareness for programs like the "Living Wage for Musicians Act of 2024." This reflects Killen's commitment to fighting for musicians' rights and better pay in the age of streaming. To learn more about his philanthropic work and other activities, fans can visit CowgirlRadio.com, which showcases the talent and stories of women in music, tackling issues such as gender inequality.

Killen's dedication to his craft and the future of the music industry highlights his purpose as an artist. His work spans a range of creative fields, from visual arts to business ventures like CowgirlRadio.com. This online radio platform is focused on promoting female artists and tackling gender inequality in the music world.

As Ben Killen's musical career continues to grow, his collaboration with Bandsintown makes it easy to integrate his multimedia and musical projects. Fans and music lovers should check out https://press.killenmusicgroup.com/news/ to get the latest news and insights from Killen's creative world.

Discussing the launch, B.D. Killen highlighted the role of community in his music career. "Music is a universal language that builds connections. Through platforms like Bandsintown and Bandcamp, we aim to cultivate a community that values and supports genuine expression," Killen noted. "Our goal is to keep listeners engaged and informed, so they feel like they're a part of our journey every step of the way."
