October 24, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Bali Exception, a notable Bali real estate agency, is bringing attention to key developments in the Indonesian property market that could impact investment choices. This agency is well-regarded for its wide range of real estate services such as villa and land sales, property management, and market research. They're closely watching the upcoming policy changes proposed by Indonesia's newly elected President, Prabowo Subianto. The administration has introduced a proposal aiming for Indonesia president to remove property tax, with hopes to boost the domestic property market and enhance its contribution to the country's GDP.

To explore the variety of properties currently available in Bali, view Bali Exception's listings on their website at bali-exception.com.

In addition to removing the property tax, Prabowo's plan seeks to eliminate the 11% Value Added Tax (PPN) and the 5% Land and Building Acquisition Fee (BPHTB) for one to three years. These efforts are meant to energize the real estate market and draw more local investment. It's still unclear how these reforms might directly affect foreign investors, but it undeniably signals a major shift in the property investment scene, presenting new opportunities for growth. Investors curious about the potential of Bali's changing property market can find available properties for sale using Bali Exception's varied listings.

Typhaine, a representative from Bali Exception, commented, "This is certainly an exciting time for property investment in Indonesia. President Prabowo Subianto's proposal to remove the property tax shows a clear commitment to strengthen the real estate sector. This creates a unique chance for investors to reconsider their strategies and possibly get involved in the Bali property market while taxes are lower." Bali Exception is prepared to support investors in taking advantage of these proposed policy changes, leveraging their insight into market trends to provide informed guidance.

For those thinking about investing in Bali, staying updated with the Indonesian government's announcements is crucial. While the reforms may not initially target foreign investors, they could still bring about indirect benefits.
