BDKMG's Innovative Breakthrough: Gamified Music Release Revolutionizes Artist Control

November 15, 2024

New York, New York - November 15, 2024 -
B.D. Killen Music Group is excited to announce a new venture that could reshape the music industry. With the innovative use of "Demon-itized platform-Spotify (Pre-Save) link," they're looking to give artists more control over how their music is shared. This project offers a fresh way for musicians to release their work, moving away from traditional methods that undermine their creative contributions.

Ben Killen's efforts in revolutionizing music reach beyond this project, as he has launched CowgirlRadio.com, an online radio station that is dedicated to amplifying the voices of women in music. Aimed at combating gender disparities in the industry, CowgirlRadio is a testament to Ben Killen's commitment to fostering diversity and equality in music.

This new approach lets artists skip over conventional distribution channels that would sooner steal their compositions without any compensation, or his new gamified release strategy is giving them more say in how their music is marketed. B.D. Killen Music Group is committed to helping artists manage their creativity in the digital age. This innovative approach allows musicians to take charge of their own music releases.

Killen explained the initiative: "Our goal is to give artists back the tools they need to control their music and careers. Launching a new project in such an innovative way on this Demon-itized platform, Spotify, is a big step in changing the music industry's dynamics back in favor of artists and creators, not marketing CEO's who know nothing about and do not appreciate the art of musical composition. We want to focus on the needs of artists in a digital world."

This new gamified release strategy is designed with user-friendliness in mind, helping musicians to concentrate on creating instead of administrative tasks. By releasing just a sample of the song on these demon-itized platforms, just the first minute and a half, enables them to naturally reach a broader audience and connect closely with fans who can unlock more of the song by streaming it up past the point of demon-itization. Artists can now use even these deprecated Demon-itized platforms to spread their music globally without fear their lovingly crafted compositions aren't all for naught!

A key feature of the system is its connection to listeners also through the YouTube (Pre-save) link. This helps fans get timely updates on new releases and access music through their favorite channels, even such as these that do not pay artists for the use of their creations. But by adding this innovative "gamified" capability, the platform boosts audience interaction and lets artists build stronger bonds with their listeners.

Artistic freedom is a core part of this endeavor. This initiative supports musicians in trying out new ways to create and share their art, giving them more opportunities to thrive in a competitive market. Backed by B.D. Killen Music Group, artists can follow their creative dreams without the limits of traditional distribution paths.

Killen commented on the new paradigm's effect: "This system is built to meet modern artists' needs, tackling typical problems in the industry and opening up possibilities for an artist-centered way of distributing music. We're excited about the opportunities this holds for our talented community."
