January 25, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

London based Lucidx has announced a free reputation management report for London car dealerships for a limited period. The report is designed to show dealerships what customers think about them and give them an idea of how they can improve their online reputation.

Deon Bryan, owner of Lucidx states, "Having a 5 star online reputation helps in improving lead conversion as it builds trust with the prospect when they see other people talking about the positive experience they have had with you. Our goal is to get you that ever important 5 star reputation."

Deon says that most companies do not know what is being said about them by customers or potential customers. The company's provided online reputation management report will show them how prospects view them and makes the information available in a matter of minutes.

"Nearly 90 percent of consumers check online reviews before they trust a company to provide them with products or services," explains Deon. He says that nine out of every ten consumers trust online reviews to tell them whether or not a company is reputable and reliable.

Lucidx assists businesses in building a great online reputation, hence bringing them a higher number of conversions from prospective customers. Deon says that their latest offering, a free online reputation management report, is being provided to car dealerships to assist them in reaching a higher number of local customers.

The report will show dealerships their reputation, good, bad or none at all, which enables them to determine where steps need to be taken, to drive in more leads and sales. Deon says that the report is often the first step in determining what needs to be fixed in order for local businesses to achieve more lead conversions. He also points out that car dealerships tend to deal with a more localised clientele, and that those consumers are likely to check the reputation of the dealership online before they decide whether or not to pick up the phone and call them.
