Dallas and Fort Worth's largest credit refiner; Consumer Financial Resources has announced a plan to reorganize in an effort to offer additional debt relief services for 2016.

"The goal was to leverage our relationships and expertise to provide more services to not only our existing clients but to our future clients as well," stated Scott Freda, President of Consumer Financial Resources.

Fresh off a very successful and prosperous 2015 campaign, in which millions of dollars in debt were consolidated into affordable programs. "In late 2015 we noticed that a lot of customers were asking us to help them repair their credit or help with other unsecured debts in addition to the student loan debt refinancing help we already provide," said Justin Hall, Director of Operations for Consumer Financial Resources.

"We had a vision that we could be a one-stop shop for lowering a person's debt and we took the opportunity by the reins." In 2015 the average student graduated with over $28,000 in debt and by reorganizing we're hoping we can put a dent in that number and put more money back in America's pockets and help in even more ways in 2016.
