Musician Ben Killen Launches "Holiday Hurdle Hopper" Game, Shining Light on Industry Challenges

December 23, 2024

New York, New York - December 23, 2024 -
B.D. Killen Music Group is thrilled to introduce its latest creation, "Holiday Hurdle Hopper," a fun web-based game that shines a light on the hurdles musicians face today. The game weaves humor and insight, giving players a unique glimpse into the challenges of a musician's life.

In "Holiday Hurdle Hopper," players guide a mini-musician character who must navigate tricky industry obstacles. As players hop across slippery, snowy logs, collecting stars to keep the path clear, they'll encounter the notorious "CLOCK LOG." This log, known for its surprising difficulty, symbolizes music fan's shortened attention spans that challenge creative folks. The game aims to be both entertaining and educational, encouraging players to think about the real-life challenges musicians deal with every day.

Ben Killen, the creative mind behind B.D. Killen Music Group and "Holiday Hurdle Hopper," shares his thoughts on this new project. "Holiday Hurdle Hopper is a fresh way for us to connect with our audience while highlighting the issues artists face. It's a fun, easy-to-access window into the conversations we're having about the industry's reality," he says. The game is currently in beta version 0.89, which means fans can help shape its future by testing it and providing feedback. Players are encouraged to try and beat Ben Killen's top score of 41 and to share their experiences on social media, building a sense of community. While "Holiday Hopper" is a game, it doesn't shy away from serious discussions about the real struggles musicians face. Player feedback is crucial for honing the game to better reflect these realities.

The artwork in the game is a blend of AI-generated images, emojis, and public domain art, showing a mix of old and new styles. Players are welcome to give feedback on this, especially regarding artistic and intellectual property aspects. B.D. Killen Music Group is eager to collaborate with artists and strives to maintain ethical standards in its use of AI and artistic expression.

This launch marks another exciting step for B.D. Killen Music Group, which consistently seeks to push boundaries and ignite meaningful discussions in the music world. For more on Ben Killen and his work, check out the B.D. Killen Music Group's profile at http://benkillen.contactin.bio/.
