

Maximize Year-End Vision Savings: Eyes on Trade Highlights FSA, HSA Benefits for Designer Eyewear

December 26, 2024

December 26, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Eyes on Trade, based in Winston-Salem, NC, is reaching out to remind clients that the end of the year is near. They're emphasizing the need to use remaining Flexible Spending Account (FSA) and Health Savings Account (HSA) funds before they expire on December 31. This boutique is well-known in the area for its wide selection of designer eyewear, catering to customers who prefer innovative, independent eyewear options.

Many people may not realize how FSA and HSA funds can significantly help with vision care costs. These funds can cover expenses for things like prescription glasses and sunglasses, which are essential, especially since these accounts usually have a strict expiration date. Eyes on Trade makes it easy for customers by accepting both FSA and HSA payments, helping to enhance the overall experience of selecting new eyewear. Additional information about their services, including comprehensive eye exams and contact lenses, can be found on their website.

Maggie Campbell, the Practice Manager at Eyes on Trade, commented, "FSA and HSA funds offer a practical way to manage healthcare costs but are often overlooked. At Eyes on Trade, we want to help people maximize their benefits. We introduce them to stylish and functional eyewear options that not only improve vision but also boost self-confidence."

One of the main goals of Eyes on Trade is to provide a carefully chosen selection of designer eyewear. The boutique features eyewear collections designed by acclaimed independent creators. These glasses have unique, high-quality frames that are rarely available at large retail chains. By shopping here, customers not only find frames that fit their look but also support local businesses and independent designers. The featured brands highlight sustainability, quality, and unique designs, giving each pair of glasses its character.

Campbell further explained, "Independent eyewear brands offer something special. Each frame balances style, functionality, and quality, letting people express their identity while depending on durable and reliable eyewear."

The welcoming atmosphere of Eyes on Trade ensures an easy shopping experience, with a range of styles from minimalistic and contemporary to bold and attention-grabbing. Their collection suits both everyday wear and special events, ensuring that customers find a suitable pair for any occasion. Customers also enjoy personalized service, helping them make the most of their FSA and HSA benefits for their eyewear needs.

The team at Eyes on Trade takes pride in guiding clients through their eyewear choices, offering extensive help in finding the right frames and ensuring they meet each person's vision care needs and personal style. Campbell noted, "Choosing the right eyewear goes beyond just meeting a prescription need?it's about enhancing confidence and the quality of daily life. Our committed team aims to provide an experience that blends style and top-tier, practical vision care."

With the FSA and HSA deadlines coming up, Eyes on Trade encourages everyone to act quickly and seize this opportunity to update their eyewear collection. The boutique offers a fantastic chance for customers to invest in eyewear that combines style and practicality, preventing their healthcare benefits from going to waste. For more details about their eyewear collections, comprehensive eye exams, and vision insurance plans, visit their website.

Customers are welcome to visit the boutique without an appointment during regular business hours to explore their unique eyewear collection or contact them through their website for further assistance.
