January 19, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Centument Review and Centument LTD product creator Gerald Reed are pleased to announce the recent release of its trading software. The features of the product has been praised by early customers, as well as reputable business reviewers who have tested the product. The software is labeled as the most successful software dedicated to binary options trading. Beginning traders are often confused by the ebb and flow of the market and end up losing funds which they cannot afford to squander.

One of the features the company says makes Centument unique is its effectiveness in placing successful and profitable trades for the customer. Wall Street major trading firms do not release their trading secrets lightly. The software uses proven techniques to trade for the most inexperienced beginning traders. User-friendly software has proven to be successful even for the beginners in binary options trading. Positive feedback is the rule for those who have tried the features of the software.

The software is controlled by CySEC, the international regulatory authority which monitors the binary options software program. Users are provided with live and real-time updates from the app. At the same time, users receive tips and guidance. Support for customers is provided around the clock.

The software is absolutely free and easy to use. A simple three-step process is all that is required to trade in the binary options markets. The first step is to create the Centument account, followed by creating a free broker's account and establishing a small trading deposit. The signals and automatic trading process begins immediately with successful growth in investment capital.

The software was developed by respected and experienced professionals who have an understanding of financial markets and corporate organization. The name 'Centenum' is a Latin term meaning a grain which bears a hundredfold.
