DrugPricer.com is a prescription drug search engine with online pharmacy directories and informative blog posts. The website now offers a Rx drug price comparison tool to help Americans save up to 90% on prescription medicines.

Statistics show that in 2015, the global prescription drug industry generated a revenue of 734 billion U.S. dollars in local pharmacy sales, with a higher percentage of that revenue being spent in U.S. pharmacies. According to DrugPricer.com, Americans can save up to 90% on Rx drug costs by finding credible online pharmacies through DrugPricer's online pharmacy directory.

The website has now launched a new feature which allows their users to compare prices between different online pharmacies and choose the best for themselves. With the new tool, users can look up prescription medicines on the website's drug search engine by entering a search query. Users are then directed to a page where they can compare prices, get coupons and buy online from licensed pharmacies.

"Save up to 90% when you buy medicine online," states the website homepage at <https://drugpricer.com/>, followed by a table that depicts several Rx drug names and how much Americans can save on a 90-day supply by buying online.

The spokesperson for DrugPricer.com made an official statement in which he discussed the new tool and spoke about the website's work in the past "Here at DrugPricer.com, we have helped millions of Americans in finding online pharmacies that offer Rx drugs at lower prices. Our pharmacy guide on our website shows users how to find a credible online pharmacy that is licensed by the U.S. government."

He further added about the new tool, "We have now launched a new price comparison tool that further simplifies the task of saving money on prescription drugs. Users of the website can look up a specific Rx drug on our search engine. Not only can the users compare prices, but they can also get discount coupons."
