Symmes Township, Ohio - January 16, 2025 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

The American Cornhole Organization (ACO), the authority of the sport since 2005, has taken a big step by expanding its tournament series and introducing new online activities to engage fans. This move reaffirms ACO's dedication to building a strong community and making Cornhole accessible to more people.

The enhanced ACO tournament series includes a wide variety of competitions for players at all skill levels. This lineup features the popular ACO Majors Tour, the competitive ACO Pro Series, and the creative ACO Skins Pro Division, where players can earn cash rewards with each pitch. Additionally, there are new tournaments designed for adaptive play, encouraging individuals with disabilities to join in. These new activities aim to give more players across the country a chance to connect with Cornhole and show off their skills in different competitive settings. Details about upcoming events and how to participate can be found on the ACO's tournament page through the American Cornhole website.

Michael "Fin" Walter, the Loudmouth of the American Cornhole Organization, is thrilled about these changes.

"Cornhole is more than just a game; it's bringing communities together across the globe. The expansion of our tournaments not only celebrates the sport's growing popularity but also invites more individuals to participate in this exciting journey with us."

ACO has also upgraded its online presence to better engage and reach out to Cornhole fans. The ACO's YouTube channel, @AmericanCornhole, is a key platform for live streams of major tournaments, like the ACO World Championships, and offers a ton of Cornhole-related content. With over 11.6K subscribers and 1.1K videos, this channel is a top spot for Cornhole action, letting viewers from all over experience the excitement of the sport.

ACO's website, American Cornhole, also includes an extensive online shop. Here, players can find certified Cornhole gear and equipment that meet official standards. The shop offers everything from official ACO boards to approved bags and various accessories, catering to players at every level.

"Our mission at the American Cornhole Organization is to make sure Cornhole stays fun and accessible to everyone, no matter their skill level or location," Walter added. "By improving our online presence and offering resources through American Cornhole, we want to make the sport easy to access while fostering a welcoming global Cornhole family oriented community."

To help the sport grow, ACO keeps partnerships with bag manufacturers, allowing them to become ACO-approved bag partners. These partnerships ensure that the equipment used in official ACO tournaments is both high-quality and meets performance standards, which maintains consistency in the sport.

Based in Camp Dennison, Ohio, the American Cornhole Organization remains the leading authority on Cornhole. It continues to uphold official cornhole rules, keep track of global player standings, and offer membership options that give exclusive access to a worldwide community of Cornhole enthusiasts.

For more details on tournaments, equipment, or becoming a member, visit the official ACO website or check out their social media pages. Joining the ACO online provides not only the latest updates on Cornhole events and news but also helps build connections within the lively Cornhole community.
