

Lee & James Elevates Real Estate Marketing with New Aerial Photography and Videography Services

February 08, 2025

PORTLAND, OR - February 08, 2025 -
Lee & James Professional Real Estate Photography has just rolled out a fresh service: aerial real estate photography and videography. This new offering means real estate professionals can show properties from angles and perspectives never imagined before. Thanks to some impressive drone technology, Lee & James is giving you a complete way to capture a property from the sky.

The buzz around aerial photography in real estate has been on the rise, and Lee & James is stepping up to meet that demand. These services provide wide-angle, bird's-eye views that help potential buyers grasp the surroundings and layout of a property. Whether it's capturing sprawling landscapes or highlighting how close a property is to schools, parks, or shopping, these aerial images bring a whole new layer to marketing real estate.

"We are excited to introduce Lee & James's aerial real estate photography and videography," says Michael Larrabee, a representative from Lee & James. "It's a step forward in offering our clients more creative and effective ways to present their properties. The addition of aerial perspectives enhances the storytelling element in real estate, which can be crucial in a competitive market."

This aerial service is a great addition to what Lee & James already offers, like top-notch real estate photos and videos. Mixing aerial shots with these existing services creates a full package that can really boost a listing's appeal. Launching these services shows how committed Lee & James is to embracing new technology and putting clients first, solidifying their place as a leader in real estate photography.

Thanks to their attention to detail and user-friendly service, Lee & James has become a favorite among realtors in cities like Portland, Vancouver, and Atlanta. Their promises of same-day delivery and straightforward pricing make it easier for clients to manage their listings. With the addition of aerial photography, Lee & James's real estate photography services are expected to become even more essential.

Lee & James is always looking to grow and adapt to what the market wants, which shows in their wide variety of services. Beyond aerial photography, they offer everything from headshots and home staging to virtual tours and enhancements like sky and lawn treatments. These options mean realtors can provide a well-put-together and enticing view of properties to potential buyers.

Adding aerial services fits right in with Lee & James's goal of delivering valuable tools for real estate marketing. These services are particularly handy for large properties, commercial sites, and homes with unique landscaping. By showing potential buyers a captivating view from above, Lee & James helps make properties more appealing, possibly speeding up sales.

"Real estate photography isn't just about taking pictures; it's about creating a visual narrative that resonates with buyers," Larrabee added. "Aerial views are exceptional in that regard. They don't just show a property; they showcase how it fits into the broader environment, providing insight and allure that ground-level shots cannot."

Those interested in these new offerings can learn more by visiting www.leeandjamesphotography.com. This site offers access to their full portfolio and past examples of work. Detailed booking info and service options, such as the newly introduced aerial photography, are also available, making it easy to enhance real estate listings with eye-catching imagery.
