Look Optometry Launches Dry Eye Campaign with Cutting-Edge Treatments

January 09, 2025

Manhattan Beach, California - January 09, 2025 -
Manhattan Beach, CA - Look Optometry has announced the launch of an educational dry eye awareness campaign, introducing advanced treatment options to help patients achieve relief from this pervasive condition. The campaign highlights innovative solutions, including radiofrequency (RF), intense pulsed light (IPL) therapy, and prescription eye drops tailored to address the root causes of dry eye disease.

?Dry eye disease impacts many aspects of daily life, from work performance to overall comfort,? said Dr. Ryan Stybel, OD, of Look Optometry. ?With advanced tools like RF and IPL therapy, alongside traditional treatments such as prescription eye drops, we can offer patients highly effective, customized solutions to restore their eye health and quality of life.?

Dry eye disease occurs when the eyes fail to produce sufficient tears or when tears evaporate too quickly, often due to screen use, aging, and environmental conditions. Look Optometry?s cutting-edge technology addresses these underlying causes, providing lasting relief for patients in the Manhattan Beach community.

Look Optometry's approach is designed to go beyond symptom management, targeting the root causes of dry eye. Radiofrequency (RF) therapy uses gentle heat to stimulate the meibomian glands, improving tear quality and stability. Intense Pulsed Light (IPL) therapy treats inflammation and unclogs the oil glands that play a critical role in lubricating eyes. For those requiring additional support, prescription eye drops effectively address chronic dryness and irritation.

?By combining the latest technologies with personalized care, we?re creating treatment plans that work for each patient?s unique needs,? added Dr. Stybel. ?Whether someone is dealing with mild discomfort or severe symptoms, we want them to know there is hope?and relief is possible.?

Left untreated, dry eye disease can lead to more than just discomfort. Chronic dry eye may increase the risk of eye infections, corneal damage, and difficulty with daily activities like reading, working on a computer, or driving. The emotional toll of living with persistent discomfort is also significant, which is why Look Optometry is committed to addressing both the physical and mental well-being of their patients. They aim to ensure that no patient feels resigned to living with dry eye when effective, advanced treatments are available.

Look Optometry encourages community members to schedule a dry eye evaluation as part of its awareness campaign. During these consultations, patients will undergo advanced diagnostic testing to determine the specific causes of their symptoms. From there, the team will create a customized treatment plan to restore comfort and support long-term eye health.

Look Optometry also aims to educate the public about preventative measures and lifestyle changes that can reduce the risk of developing dry eye. This includes strategies for maintaining eye health in screen-heavy environments, tips for proper hydration, and ways to protect the eyes from environmental stressors like wind and dry indoor air.

Look Optometry is currently scheduling appointments for dry eye evaluations and treatments. To learn more about their advanced services or to book an appointment, visit their website or call their Manhattan Beach office at (866) 306-1450. Relief for dry eyes begins with a simple consultation.
