Accent on Speaking, an online training business based in Sacramento, CA, has announced a webinar for people who speak English as a second language (ESL) and who would like to improve how they sound in English. The webinar will cover an important sound that is missing from most non-native speakers pronunciation. This is something that really separates how native and non-native speakers sound. Interested people can sign up for the upcoming English pronunciation webinar and get some free training on how to improve their spoken English.

Sheri Summers, owner of Accent on Speaking and creator of the American Accent Course, says: "We want to help non-native English speakers reduce their foreign accent. The webinar will teach them the trick that makes a huge difference in pronunciation. Our program is unique and has proven results. We have already helped thousands of people and look forward to helping many more."

Most people who learn English as a second language never have the opportunity to learn about pronunciation or accent. This is because it is almost unheard of for an ESL class to include accent training. Additionally, many ESL teachers are not native English speakers either. This makes it very difficult for people to speak in such a way that sounds as close to native as possible.

Accent on Speaking also believes that most adults are not able to hear the difference between certain rhythms and sounds. These need to be pointed out until they are properly recognized, enabling people to learn them. If this is not done properly, people will simply never learn to use those sounds correctly.

Through Accent on Speaking's American Accent Course, people can learn to change their accent and pronunciation. "You just need the right instruction," adds Sheri Summers. "That's what we do. We show you what you are missing and teach you how to add it into your speech so you sound great and feel confident when speaking English."

People can sign up for the course through the company's website. Many people have already worked with Accent on Speaking and have been very positive about the results they have received. The company looks forward to making a real difference to more people.
