Cold Weather Raising Rat Infestations in Grand Rapids, MI ? Parshall Pest Control Experts Warns Homeowners

January 13, 2025

MARNE, MI - January 13, 2025 -
Grand Rapids, MI ? As temperatures drop in Central Grand Rapids, Michigan, homeowners are facing an increased risk of rat infestations. Corey Parshall, owner of Parshall Pest Control Experts, warns that the colder weather drives rats to seek warmth and shelter within residential properties, posing significant dangers to both the structure and safety of homes.

Understanding the Threat: Rats, driven by the need for warmth during the colder months, are becoming a growing concern for residents of Grand Rapids. "As temperatures fall, we typically see a spike in calls from homeowners dealing with unwanted rodents," explains Parshall. The loss of natural habitats due to ongoing development in the area exacerbates the problem, pushing rats into residential areas in search of refuge.

The Dangers of Rat Infestations: Rats can cause extensive damage to homes. They are known to chew on various materials, including electrical wiring, which can lead to severe consequences. "Rats see electrical wires as nesting material, not realizing the fire hazard they create," Parshall cautions. Beyond the risk of fires, rat infestations can lead to contamination through droppings and urine, posing health risks to residents.

Expert Insights from Corey Parshall: Corey Parshall, with years of experience in pest control, emphasizes the importance of early detection and prevention. "During a recent service call, we encountered a serious rat problem in a home's attic. The rats were so bold as to greet us as we installed our one-way valve cage system," he recounts. This incident underscores the urgency of addressing rat issues early to prevent them from escalating into larger, more dangerous problems.

Preventative Measures Critical for Homeowners: To combat the rising threat of rat infestations, Parshall urges homeowners to take proactive steps in securing their properties. "Sealing off potential entry points is crucial. Rats can squeeze through incredibly small gaps, so inspecting and sealing gutters, soffits, and any other open spaces around your home is essential," he advises.

In addition to sealing entry points, Parshall recommends regular inspections of the home's exterior to identify and address any vulnerabilities. "Rats are surprisingly agile and can climb trees, pool enclosures, and even the sides of houses to access an attic," he warns. Ensuring that trees and branches are trimmed away from the home can further reduce the risk of infestation.

Actionable Advice for Central Grand Rapids Homeowners: To protect their homes and families, residents of Central Grand Rapids should conduct a thorough inspection of their home's exterior, paying close attention to areas where different building materials meet. Seal all potential entry points, using materials like steel wool and caulk, which are difficult for rats to gnaw through. Maintain a clean and tidy yard, keeping garbage in tightly sealed containers and removing debris that could serve as nesting material. Contact professional pest control services like Parshall Pest Control Experts, https://www.google.com/maps/place/Parshall+Pest+Control+Experts/@43.0552509,-85.8634923,12.57z/data=!4m6!3m5!1s0x8819a70736e7ccdd:0xbf93e3107996db39!8m2!3d43.0392448!4d-85.8239453!16s%2Fg%2F11vrhs1s8s?, at the first sign of a rat problem, such as droppings, claw marks, or unusual noises in the walls or attic.

About Parshall Pest Control Experts: Parshall Pest Control Experts, led by Corey Parshall, specializes in wildlife exclusion and pest management in the Grand Rapids area. With a commitment to safeguarding homes and promoting a pest-free environment, the company offers expert advice and effective solutions to combat the growing issue of rat infestations. Parshall intends to inform and engage homeowners in Grand Rapids, MI about the increasing risk of rat infestations as winter continues, providing them with expert insights and actionable advice to protect their properties.

###

For more information about Parshall Pest Control, contact the company here:Parshall Pest ControlCorey Parshall616-327-5552info@parshallpestcontrol.comParshall Pest Control Experts1388 Comstock St.Marne, MI 49435Phone: (616) 327-5552Email: info@parshallpestcontrol.com

Parshall Pest Control

Parshall Pest Control Experts of Grand Rapids, MI are expert professional pest control services in Kent County, MI. Specializing in complete home protection to eliminate biting pests for your custom insect protection plans for ticks, moles, or mosquitos.

Website: https://parshallpestcontrol.com/exterminator-grand-rapids-kent-county/

Email: info@parshallpestcontrol.com

Phone: 616-327-5552

