

NurseRegistry Offers In-Home Nursing Care for Parkinsons Disease

January 22, 2025

SANTA MONICA, CA - January 22, 2025 -
NurseRegistry, known for its skilled nursing services, is proud to offer specialized in-home care for those living with Parkinson's disease. This premier service is all about helping people maintain their independence and enjoy a better quality of life. Operating across California and Southern Florida, NurseRegistry creates customized care plans delivered by experienced registered nurses (RNs) and licensed vocational nurses (LVNs)/licensed practical nurses (LPNs).

Josh Pangan, NurseRegistry's CEO, expressed, "Our aim is to offer complete support that meets both the physical and emotional needs of our clients with Parkinson's. With over 500 licensed nursing professionals available, we are well-equipped to provide high-quality care that can manage symptoms effectively and boost the quality of life."

The in-home care services for Parkinson's patients include managing medication, monitoring symptoms, preventing falls, and helping with mobility, among other tasks. The nurse staffing agency believes in creating personalized care plans that can change as patients' needs evolve. By coordinating with clients' healthcare providers, these plans are designed to make life a bit easier for those living with Parkinson's disease.

For many individuals dealing with Parkinson's, managing everyday activities can be tough. Having a private nurse for Parkinson's disease at home ensures they get consistent and personalized care tailored to their health needs. This support can improve medical outcomes and overall well-being by reducing stress and enhancing security at home.

Caring for Parkinson's involves various aspects like medication schedules and regular treatment adjustments. NurseRegistry works with highly skilled nurses who understand these needs, providing essential services to help patients maintain their health and daily routines. These private nurses are prepared to handle everything from basic tasks to more advanced nursing needs.

Pangan highlighted, "Tailored care plans make a big difference for our clients. They allow people to hold onto their normal lives while getting the support they need. Their nurses are there to ease daily life for those with Parkinson's."

For family members and caregivers, knowing that a professional nurse is available around the clock can offer peace of mind. NurseRegistry's services aim to ease the load on family caregivers, letting them spend more quality time with their loved ones instead of being bogged down by caregiving duties. This also helps improve communication and coordination with healthcare providers, fostering a cohesive care environment.

The expertise of NurseRegistry's staff in handling Parkinson's-specific issues is essential. The nurses assist with mobility, manage medication side effects, and serve as a link between patients and their healthcare teams, providing critical support. As patients' needs change, the ability to customize care ensures patients always receive professional help.
