

New Ministry-To-Children Resource Unveils 52 Weekly Biblical Affirmations for Kids to Empower Faith and Confidence

February 13, 2025

Sellersburg, Indiana - February 13, 2025 -
Ministry-To-Children has launched a new resource designed to strengthen the faith and confidence of young Christians. This initiative introduces 52 weekly biblical affirmations for kids, which parents and educators can use to guide children. These affirmations are based on scripture, providing kids with a way to learn and internalize positive Christian messages.

Tony Kummer, the founder of Ministry-To-Children, spoke about the importance of these affirmations. "We want children to build a strong faith foundation early on. These affirmations gently remind them of God's love and promises, helping them cultivate a positive self-image and develop resilience through scripture," Kummer says.

Since 2007, Ministry-To-Children has been a go-to resource for churches worldwide, offering free Bible-based materials for children's ministries. The website provides a range of resources, including Bible lessons, craft activities, coloring pages, and complete curriculums. Staying true to its mission, the site is expanding its offerings with this new initiative focused on biblical affirmations for kids.

Interested parties can find resources like Bible Lessons for Kids on their website, which provide easy-to-teach materials for children of all ages. The site also offers craft activities that align with these lessons to engage children creatively while learning. More resources are available, such as a Free Kids' Bible Lessons PDF and Free Easter Coloring Pages to enhance seasonal teachings, along with a 52-Week Curriculum for Sunday School that helps structure an entire year's worth of lessons.

The affirmations address various aspects of spiritual growth, such as identity in Christ, God's love and care, and building strength and confidence. Each affirmation comes with a related Bible verse, making the message easy for children to understand. The goal is to incorporate these affirmations into daily activities, like morning devotionals, bedtime prayers, or as notes in lunchboxes for encouragement.

Using these biblical affirmations is an effective way for children to engage with their faith. By repeating positive messages, children can boost their confidence and learn to speak positively about themselves, aligning their thoughts with Christian values. Kummer adds, "Memorizing these affirmations helps children build a faith connection that becomes part of their daily lives. It's about embedding God's truth in their hearts and minds."

The resource is available for free on the Ministry-To-Children website, complete with extra materials and a FAQ section. This assists parents and educators in understanding how to incorporate the affirmations into children's daily activities. The page also links to other resources provided by Ministry-To-Children, allowing users to discover more educational materials on the platform.

In addition to affirmations, the website continues to support the Christian community with various printables and curriculums, including a comprehensive 52-week Sunday School curriculum. Dedicated to meeting the needs of churches and educators, Ministry-To-Children remains committed to offering diverse content for growing children's ministries.

"Children are the future of our faith communities," Kummer emphasizes. "With the constant busyness of life, it's important that we offer kids the tools they need to grow spiritually. These affirmations are one way we can help with their development."

For those looking for the latest updates from Ministry-To-Children, the biblical affirmations for kids and other resources are available online on the Ministry-To-Children platform. Associated press releases are also hosted on Press Advantage.

With this new addition, Ministry-To-Children continues its mission to empower young believers. By equipping them with faith-based resources, the organization helps children build a resilient, confident, and spiritually-aligned life. For more information, those interested can visit their website.
