$7.65 Million Settlement Secured by Haggard Crime Victim Attorney in Negligent Security Wrongful Death Case

February 18, 2025

Coral Gables, Florida - February 18, 2025 -
Miami, FL - The Haggard Law Firm has successfully secured a $7.65 million settlement in a negligent security wrongful death case, reinforcing the critical responsibility of property owners to ensure the safety of their premises. This case stemmed from the tragic murder of a father of three, who was fatally shot outside his Miami-Dade apartment complex. The victim?s family, represented by The Haggard Law Firm, pursued justice by holding the property owner accountable for failing to implement adequate security measures that could have prevented the attack.

According to court documents, the apartment complex had a well-documented history of violent crimes, yet management failed to take the necessary steps to enhance security. Despite previous incidents, property management neglected to install essential safety measures such as proper lighting, controlled entry access, and trained security personnel. Surveillance footage and witness testimonies revealed that no security guards were present at the time of the shooting, leaving residents vulnerable to violent crime. The crime victim lawsuit argued that these failures directly contributed to an environment where such a tragedy was foreseeable and preventable.

Michael Haggard, Esq., managing partner of Haggard Crime Victim Attorney, emphasized the significance of this case and the broader implications of premises liability. ?This settlement sends a powerful message to negligent property owners who prioritize profits over people?s safety. No family should endure the pain of losing a loved one due to preventable violence. We are committed to holding accountable those who fail to protect their residents and visitors,? Haggard stated.

Negligent security cases arise when property owners and management companies fail to provide adequate security measures, leading to preventable harm. Under premises liability law, property owners have a duty to take reasonable precautions to prevent criminal activity on their premises. This includes hiring security personnel, maintaining properly functioning surveillance systems, ensuring sufficient lighting, and implementing access control measures. When property owners ignore these responsibilities, they create dangerous conditions that can lead to serious injuries or fatalities.

The $7.65 million settlement secured by The Haggard Law Firm underscores the devastating consequences of negligent security and the legal recourse available for victims and their families. The firm has a longstanding history of advocating for crime victims and has successfully litigated numerous cases that hold negligent property owners accountable while driving necessary changes in security practices. This settlement serves not only as justice for the victim?s family but also as a warning to property owners who fail to take the safety of their residents seriously.

Negligent security lawsuits also serve a greater purpose by compelling businesses, landlords, and management companies to improve their security measures. In cases where violent crime is foreseeable, failing to implement basic security protections can have life-altering consequences. By pursuing legal action, victims and their families help bring attention to unsafe conditions, prompting changes that can prevent future tragedies from occurring.
