January 28, 2016 -
RothGreaves & Associates, an engineering firm in Long Lake, MN, has launched a brand new website, which is one of the big announcements about the company as of late. This new website is to be used for offering parts and services for medical device manufacturers. In addition, the company was also featured in Bloomberg. With all these developments, they aim to serve their clients even better than before.

A representative from RothGreaves & Associates says: "We are a full-service, multi-discipline, engineering firm that provides technical expertise to medical device manufacturers, pharmaceutical producers, and high-technology firms. Our new website lists all our products, including custom designs. We are so proud of the fact that we were recently featured in Bloomberg as well."

One of the company's most popular products are the precision coil winders used by manufacturers of medical devices. These winders can handle all present and future coiling requirements of their clients. Their standard winders have a number of important features, including high RPM motors, electronic spool tensioners, analog pitch compensators, multi-filar payout racks and hot air torches. They also offer on-site training for their clients to ensure they get the most out of their winders. Other features can also be added as per customers'

In the Bloomberg article, the RothGreaves engineering firm received a company overview, which includes a snapshot of the business and details about the different people who work there. In the article, it is stated that, "RothGreaves & Associates, Inc. provides engineering services. It offers mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, chemical engineering, software engineering, and aerospace engineering services. Additionally, the company manufactures precision wire winders; precision control manufacturing oven; and robotic loading towers. It caters to medical, electronic and manufacturing sectors. RothGreaves & Associates, Inc. is based in Long Lake, Minnesota."

The company is proud of the advances they have made over the past few weeks. The business has existed for a number of decades, in which time they have set themselves apart as one of the best in their field. They feel that through the technological and digital advances they have made as of late, they are looking forward expanding their reach and serving their customers better.
