agileKRC Announces Launch of Updated AgilePM v3 Training in London

March 17, 2025

LONDON, UK - March 17, 2025 - agileKRC, a leader in agile project management training, has announced the launch of its updated classroom training in AgilePM, now based on the latest version, AgilePM v3, in London on 17 March 2025. This enhancement aligns with the latest advancements in agile methodologies, project management, and technology, marking a significant step forward in cultivating a more human-centred approach to project management. The new AgilePM v3 certification is designed to equip agileKRC?s students with the most current skills and knowledge, ensuring they remain competitive in the evolving job market. By integrating fresh ideas and improved methodologies, the course aims to better address the needs of modern businesses, reinforcing the importance of value creation and leadership in project management.

"The transition to AgilePM v3 represents a monumental leap in how we prepare our students for real-world project management challenges," stated Jay Gao, Operations Manager at agileKRC. "Our updated training course incorporates the latest industry practices and focuses not just on delivering products but on creating tangible business value at every step. This aligns with our commitment to providing top-notch education that enables future agile leaders." This strategic upgrade is expected to further solidify agileKRC's position as a premier provider of agile training, reflecting the growing demand for professionals adept in agile methodologies. With agileKRC?s training, students can anticipate emerging as agile leaders who not only manage but lead projects with enhanced efficacy and strategic insight.

For those interested in advancing their project management skills, more information about the AgilePM v3 training can be found at Agile PM certification training courses page. The updated curriculum includes comprehensive modules designed to enhance learning and retention through hands-on, interactive simulations. agileKRC encourages prospective students to explore these resources to better understand how the AgilePM certification can elevate their professional standing. As the demand for agile skills continues to rise, this training offers a strategic advantage to those seeking to excel in dynamic work environments.

Jay Gao further commented, "The enhancements in AgilePM v3 are inspired by our commitment to continuous improvement, a core principle of agile methodologies. By adopting this new version, we are not just keeping pace with industry changes; we are setting a new standard for agile education." Students can visit Agile training courses page for additional details. The course's emphasis on SCRUM integration and multi-team project guidance makes it a comprehensive solution for modern project management challenges, ensuring students are well-equipped to handle complex project environments confidently.

The introduction of AgilePM v3 is poised to have significant implications for the future of project management. As organisations increasingly prioritise agile methodologies, professionals who possess the AgilePM certification will likely see enhanced career prospects and opportunities. The shift towards value creation and leadership in project management heralds a new era where agile practices are not just beneficial but essential. agileKRC?s commitment to updating its training offerings ensures students are at the forefront of these industry shifts, ready to lead and innovate. As the business landscape continues to evolve, agile methodologies are set to become more integral to successful project execution.
