Rightnow Products Limited, a company in Central Hong Kong that markets the For-Knees braces, wants to emphasize a Harvard Medical Publications article that recommends the possible use of knee braces for those with arthritis of the knees. The article points out that there is likely to be a link between arthritis relief in men and wearing a knee brace. The article can be read at <http://www.health.harvard.edu/knees/ask-the-doctor-braces-for-knee-arthritis>.

Eric Arnow, developer of the For-Knees Braces for Rightnow Products Limited, says: "It is important not to draw immediate conclusions. The reality is that medical research is still mixed. However, preliminary results show that men with knee arthritis could benefit from wearing an unloader brace or a knee sleeve. In so doing, they may find pain relief, as well as being better able to perform various physical activities. We are really encouraged by this research."

The For-Knees knee brace has long been very popular and has received over 200 positive reviews through the Amazon marketplace. It is available through <http://www.amazon.com/dp/B016WQW7A6>, where the product details and features are clearly listed, as well as some of the benefits that users can experience. Rightnow Products Limited is very much interested in scientific research that link knee braces to increased stability, pain relief and faster recovery times.

The product, as stated, has been very positively reviewed by people who have used it. "Great product for your aching knees," says Amy L.H. "I've watched and listened to my husband suffer from severe knee pain for years. His pain comes from working on F16 jets for over 20 years. I purchased these knee sleeves due to the magnets which helps relieve pain. He loves them. He loves them so much that I bought him a second pair so that I could keep a pair washed and ready to wear."

People who are interested on how the knee braces work and their features, are encouraged to visit www.for-knees.com/features for further information. Details about specific medical conditions that are being studied or have shown to benefit from wearing a knee brace are also included.
