Local Attorneys Offer Free Consultations for Victims of Clergy Abuse in Pennsylvania

March 07, 2025

PHILADELPHIA, PA - March 07, 2025 -
Philadelphia, PA ? Ashley DiLiberto, Esq. - The Abuse Lawyer PA, a distinguished law firm specializing in sexual abuse cases, has announced the launch of a free consultation program for victims of clergy abuse across Pennsylvania. This initiative is designed to provide critical legal support and guidance to survivors who have experienced abuse at the hands of religious leaders. With ongoing investigations into widespread clergy abuse in Pennsylvania and recent legislative changes expanding survivors' rights, the firm seeks to ensure that victims have access to justice and resources without financial barriers.

"Clergy abuse cases are often complex and emotionally challenging for survivors," said Ashley DiLiberto, Esq., founder of Survivors of Abuse PA. "Many victims suffer in silence for years, uncertain of their rights or the legal actions available to them. Our goal is to provide a safe, confidential space where survivors can learn about their options without any financial burden or obligation."

The free consultation program offers victims the opportunity to speak one-on-one with experienced attorneys who specialize in clergy abuse cases in PA. These consultations include:

Confidential Case Evaluations ? Survivors will have the chance to share their experiences privately and receive a professional assessment of their potential legal claims.

Legal Guidance on Pennsylvania Laws ? Attorneys will explain any potential changes in Pennsylvania law that affect clergy abuse cases, including the statute of limitations.

Review of Statute of Limitations ? Legal experts will determine how time limitations impact each individual case and what options remain available for seeking justice.

Next Steps for Pursuing Justice and Compensation ? Survivors will receive clear guidance on how to proceed, whether through civil lawsuits or other legal avenues.

DiLiberto emphasizes that these consultations are entirely free of charge, with no obligation to retain the firm?s services. The primary objective is to empower survivors with information about their rights and legal options.

For years, clergy abuse survivors have faced significant obstacles in seeking justice, including institutional cover-ups, expired statutes of limitations, and societal stigma. However, recent legislative developments in Pennsylvania have opened new opportunities for survivors to pursue legal action. Many victims who were previously unable to file claims due to time restrictions may now have pathways to seek compensation and accountability.

?Many clergy abuse survivors have carried their trauma in silence for years, unsure of their legal options,? DiLiberto explained. ?We want them to know that it?s never too late to speak with us, and that they have a dedicated advocate in their corner.?

Ashley DiLiberto, Esq. - The Abuse Lawyer PA has a strong history of representing abuse survivors and securing substantial settlements and verdicts against perpetrators. The firm?s attorneys are well-versed in the legal complexities of clergy abuse cases and the unique challenges survivors face. Their experience ensures that each case is handled with the utmost care, professionalism, and commitment to justice.

Beyond legal counsel, the firm also recognizes the emotional and psychological impact of clergy abuse. To support survivors holistically, they offer referrals to trauma-informed therapists, support groups, and advocacy organizations. Ensuring that survivors have access to mental health resources is a core component of the firm?s survivor-centered approach.

Survivors interested in scheduling a free consultation can do so discreetly through the firm?s website. All communications are strictly confidential and protected under attorney-client privilege, ensuring that survivors can speak openly without fear of exposure or retaliation.

With a compassionate and survivor-focused approach, the firm is committed to helping victims seek justice, healing, and the compensation they deserve. Their legal team fights tirelessly to hold perpetrators and institutions accountable while providing unwavering support to survivors throughout the legal process.
