

Atlanta Car Accident Lawyer at Ross Moore Law Battles New Tort Reform Challenges

March 20, 2025

ATLANTA, GA - March 20, 2025 -
Ross Moore Law, a well-known personal injury firm in Georgia, has announced its response to a new tort reform proposal, Senate Bill 68 (SB 68). This bill aims to change how personal injury claims are handled by setting limits on noneconomic damages and tightening rules on recovering certain medical expenses. Supporters of the bill believe it could minimize frivolous lawsuits and help stabilize insurance costs. However, critics, including those at Ross Moore Law, argue that it might mainly benefit insurance companies and big corporations, potentially making it tougher for injured people to get the compensation they need.

These proposed changes are particularly significant for car accident cases, adding more complexity to what is already a challenging legal process. The new rules might make it harder for victims to get fair compensation for their damages. With possible new trial procedures and restrictions, individuals might face longer and more complicated cases when they seek justice.

In light of these developments, Ross Moore Law is utilizing its expertise to keep advocating for their clients.

The firm has a skilled team of attorneys experienced in maneuvering through the complexities of personal injury claims. Even as caps on noneconomic damages threaten to make cases more complicated, they remain dedicated to protecting the people they serve. Ross Moore Law Car Accident Lawyers are ready to meet these challenges, applying their extensive experience to every case.

Ross Moore stated, "Our promise to our clients stays strong, even with changes like those brought by SB 68. We have always focused on meeting our clients' needs, making sure they receive the justice they deserve. Despite new obstacles, our team is well-prepared to navigate these changes and secure fair results for our clients."

The firm's flexibility and determination show in their proactive steps to understand and mitigate the possible effects of SB 68. They are focused on continuously updating their strategies to adapt to the changing legal environment while making sure car accident victims' rights are protected. Ross Moore Law aims to conduct detailed investigations, develop effective legal tactics, and stay ahead of procedural changes to prevent clients from being negatively impacted by the new law.

Another representative from the firm noted, "SB 68 presents challenges, but ones we can overcome. Our attorneys are committed to staying informed on legislative changes and adjusting our strategies for each unique case. We are dedicated to exploring all legal avenues to secure the best possible outcomes for our clients."

Ross Moore Law's knowledge extends beyond just car accidents. They handle a wide range of personal injury cases, including those involving truck and motorcycle accidents, medical malpractice, and wrongful death. This broad expertise is crucial as they work to effectively manage the new rules introduced by SB 68.
