Horst Shewmaker, a well-known personal injury law firm in Alpharetta, Georgia, recently secured a $500,000 settlement for a client who suffered serious injuries from a dog bite. This victory showcases the firm's dedication to defending personal injury victims and highlights its expertise in handling such cases. Back in 2024, the client was bitten while she was taking care of a dog as part of her job with a pet-sitting service. The attack happened when she tried to pick up a dog bowl and was seriously injured, especially on her face. She lost a significant part of her lip, which required immediate emergency surgery. These injuries have left her facing long-term recovery issues that affect her ability to eat, smile, and speak normally. Despite these significant challenges, the pet-sitting company refused to cover the incident, forcing her to rely on her legal team to seek fair compensation.

Zachary S. Shewmaker, a partner at Horst Shewmaker, explained, "This case was particularly challenging given the severe nature of the injuries and the initial denial of responsibility from the dog-sitting company. We were committed to ensuring our client received the full extent of compensation deserved, making her recovery our priority."

Thanks to the firm's thorough work, which included submitting detailed photos of the injuries and an animal control report to the homeowner's insurance, they were able to secure the full policy limit of $500,000. This amount is a significant relief for the client, who is dealing with a slow recovery exacerbated by delays in reconstructive surgery.

Another firm partner, Michael W. Horst, stated, "Our client endured a traumatic experience, and it was our mission to navigate the legal pathways vigorously to ensure she did not suffer financial hardship on top of her physical and emotional injuries. Achieving this settlement was a testament to our commitment to every individual we represent."
