Pennsylvania Law Firm Expands Services to Support Survivors of Institutional Sexual Abuse

April 07, 2025

PHILADELPHIA, PA - April 07, 2025 -
Philadelphia, PA ? Ashley DiLiberto, Esq. is dedicated to representing sexual abuse victims, and she and her firm are continuing to provide comprehensive support for survivors of institutional sexual abuse across Pennsylvania. "There is a growing demand for legal representation for individuals who have suffered abuse in settings such as schools, religious organizations, sports programs, and healthcare facilities," says DiLiberto.

DiLiberto continues, "Sexual abuse within institutions often involves complex legal challenges, including cover-ups, power imbalances, and failure by organizations to take accountability for their actions. Survivors of institutional abuse frequently encounter additional obstacles when seeking justice, including fear of retaliation, emotional trauma, and legal loopholes that allow organizations to evade responsibility."

DiLiberto?s services aim to provide comprehensive support to these survivors, addressing the unique challenges they face in seeking justice. Many institutions have historically ignored or minimized allegations of abuse, prioritizing their reputation over survivor well-being. Her mission is to change that narrative and ensure that survivors receive the justice they deserve.

The law firm has several initiatives designed to strengthen legal representation for institutional abuse survivors:

A Dedicated Team of Attorneys Specializing in Institutional Abuse Cases ? The firm has a robust team of legal professionals with extensive experience in handling institutional abuse claims, ensuring that clients receive top-tier representation.

Trauma-Informed Legal Representation?Recognizing the psychological impact of abuse, the firm ensures that attorneys and staff are educated in trauma-informed practices, creating a supportive and compassionate legal process.

Expanded Network of Expert Witnesses and Mental Health Professionals ? The firm will collaborate with leading forensic psychologists, child advocacy specialists, and institutional policy experts to strengthen cases and provide survivors with the resources needed for recovery.

"Many survivors of institutional abuse feel alone and unsure about their legal rights," explained DiLiberto. "Our goal is to bridge that gap by providing accessible legal education and equipping survivors with the tools they need to seek justice. Knowledge is power, and we want every survivor to know that they are not alone."

Survivors of Abuse PA has long been at the forefront of legal advocacy for sexual abuse survivors. The firm supports legislative changes that would allow more survivors to pursue justice, particularly those who were previously barred from filing due to outdated legal restrictions.

"The current statute of limitations has denied too many survivors their day in court," said DiLiberto. "We continue to fight for reforms that will allow all survivors, no matter when their abuse occurred, to seek justice against those responsible."

Ashley DiLiberto, Esq. - The Abuse Lawyer PA has secured millions of dollars in compensation for Plaintiffs, holding Defendants accountable for their negligence. The firm has successfully represented clients in high-profile cases against powerful organizations, ensuring that survivors receive both financial compensation and the acknowledgment they deserve.

Survivors of Abuse PA reaffirms its unwavering commitment to advocating for abuse survivors throughout Pennsylvania. The firm continues to offer free, confidential consultations to individuals who have experienced sexual abuse, ensuring that no survivor has to face the legal system alone.
