With extensive experience representing survivors of institutional abuse, Giuffra and his legal team provide dedicated representation to hold both perpetrators and institutions accountable for failing to protect students. Through civil litigation, survivors can take action against the individuals responsible and the institutions that enabled the abuse.?

Boarding schools are entrusted with providing safe educational environments, yet numerous survivors have come forward with distressing accounts of abuse by teachers, administrators, and staff. Institutions that neglect to implement safeguards, respond adequately to complaints, or remove known offenders contribute to a culture of silence and ongoing harm. Many cases of abuse remain unreported for years as survivors grapple with the emotional impact of their experiences. Thomas Giuffra, Esq. ? The Abuse Lawyer NY, assists survivors in breaking their silence and pursuing the justice they deserve.?

NY survivors of boarding school sexual abuse have legal options, including pursuing criminal charges and civil lawsuits. While the criminal justice system seeks to punish offenders, civil litigation allows survivors to recover financial compensation for the trauma they have endured. Civil lawsuits also expose systemic failures within educational institutions, encouraging policy changes that better protect students in the future.?

In many cases, the responsibility for abuse in boarding schools extends beyond the individual perpetrator. Schools, administrators, and governing bodies may be held liable for failing to prevent or properly address instances of abuse. New York has enacted laws, such as the Child Victims Act (CVA) and the Adult Survivors Act (ASA), which extended the time survivors have to file lawsuits, even if the abuse occurred decades ago. These laws recognize the long-term impact of trauma and provide survivors with the opportunity to seek justice on their own terms.?

Update on Legal Timeframes:

Child Victims Act (CVA): The CVA previously allowed survivors of childhood sexual abuse to file lawsuits regardless of when the abuse occurred. The lookback window for the CVA closed on August 14, 2021. However, survivors still have extended time to file civil claims compared to previous statutes of limitations.

Adult Survivors Act (ASA): The ASA provided a one-year lookback window for survivors of sexual abuse that occurred when they were over the age of 18 to file civil lawsuits. This window began on November 24, 2022, and concluded on November 23, 2023. ?

Survivors may be eligible to recover damages for medical expenses, therapy costs, emotional distress, and other hardships. Thomas Giuffra, Esq. ?
