WASHINGTON, D.C. - Washington Eye Doctors, a premier optometry practice with offices in Washington, D.C., Chevy Chase, MD, and Arlington, VA, has been officially recognized as a 2025 Myopia Change Agent by a leading eye care industry initiative. This designation honors practices and providers who are pioneering myopia management through advanced treatment, patient education, and a commitment to slowing the progression of nearsightedness, particularly in children and young adults.

?This recognition reflects our practice?s longstanding belief that early intervention is key to preserving lifelong eye health,? said Michael P. Rosenblatt, OD. ?As myopia continues to affect more young people every year, it?s our responsibility to not only treat it but to educate families on why treatment matters. We?re proud to be part of the movement changing the future of eye care.?

The Myopia Change Agent program celebrates forward-thinking practices that have made myopia control a central part of their clinical mission. Washington Eye Doctors earned the designation for integrating proactive solutions ? including orthokeratology (ortho-k), low-dose atropine therapy, and customized multifocal lenses ? into routine patient care and their efforts to inform the public about the long-term risks of unmanaged myopia.

In recent years, myopia has evolved from a simple refractive issue into a global public health concern. It?s estimated that by 2050, half of the world?s population will be myopic, with many individuals at heightened risk of serious complications like retinal detachment, glaucoma, and macular degeneration. The Myopia Change Agent designation positions Washington Eye Doctors as a practice on the front lines of that fight ? not just prescribing lenses but actively working to shift the trajectory of eye health for the next generation.

At the center of Washington Eye Doctors? approach is a dedication to customizing care based on each patient?s unique risk factors, age, lifestyle, and visual demands. Their clinical team leverages evidence-based treatments to control axial length progression and collaborates closely with families to ensure patients remain engaged in their care plans. As a result, their pediatric myopia patients receive ongoing support designed to yield long-term benefits beyond improved eyesight.

In addition to clinical excellence, the practice is deeply committed to education and advocacy. Washington Eye Doctors empowers parents with the knowledge needed to make informed decisions about their children?s eye health through in-office conversations, digital content, and community outreach. They aim to create a more informed patient population and spark a larger conversation about the importance of managing childhood myopia as early as possible.

This designation is expected to elevate Washington Eye Doctors? strong reputation in the D.C. area and beyond. For families seeking a practice that combines medical precision with a progressive mindset, this honor solidifies Washington Eye Doctors as a trusted partner in proactive pediatric eye care.
