

VisaCompare Releases New Information For Adrenaline Junkies

February 04, 2016

February 04, 2016 -
London, United Kingdom business VisaCompare has recently released a new blog post to address the travel needs of so called 'adrenaline junkies'. While the company has long had a focus on helping people who actually want to move to foreign countries with their visa requirements, they also provide advice, information and guidance for those who simply want to go on vacation. As a result, they have been releasing a number of pieces to address these types of travelers.

Xi Lin, spokesperson for VisaCompare, says: "From base jumping off of Norway's most incredible Fjords to bungee jumping from the most famous bridge in New Zealand, adrenaline junkies around the world are always looking for the next extreme activity to get their blood pumping. We want to help them turn those dreams into reality, making sure they know where to go and how to get there."

Some of the activities and locations the company is highlighting include canyoning in Interlaken, Switzerland; cliff Diving in Madagascar; white water rafting in New Zealand; mountain climbing in Nepal; volcano boarding in Nicaragua; bungee jumping from The Macau Tower, China; extreme surfing in Tavarua, Fiji; and base jumping from Meru Peak, Himalayan Mountains. Some of these locations can be visited without a visa, depending on where the traveler lives. However, places such as China and Madagascar do require a visa and VisaCompare wants to help people get that visa so they can enjoy their adrenaline-filled journey.

Those who have used the services of VisaCompare have been incredibly positive about them. "I have had a nightmare in trying to submit my own application for a South African Working visa and struggled for months on paper work," says Baldev from the Ukraine. "I didn't even know that there was a site like this available until a friend advised me to come to VisaCompare. All I had to do was sign up and it was all done at the click of the button and now I've got a company in my own town doing my application. Big help guys."
