January 28, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Centument review, as it was released, has now provided detailed insight into the product and its pros and cons for users. Since it is aimed at making binary options decision making easier, the software review thoroughly goes through a detailed explanation.

Gerald Reed's brainchild, Centument, has been made available for readers as a new and highly advanced binary options trading software. Since the software had created huge buzz before its release, its detailed review has presented a great source of information for users to get to know about its minute details from all aspects before they decide further over it.

While the product itself was being touted as an extremely helpful tool for the traders, novice as well as experienced ones, the review states that it has been meticulously created with a one-of-a-kind algorithm that uses all trading techniques. In addition to this, the software integrates several of their effective methods right into one smart trading algorithm, review states.

The creator of the software, Gerald Reed, said, "The objective of making this software was to present traders with an extremely easy but highly effective tool for making trades." He mentioned the hard work done for creating this software and the expertise of its creative minds and said, "The software program was created by a team of professional traders, that were part of a fast track trading team before Lehmann Brothers bust."

The Centument review mentioned that the software uses its advanced algorithm to make trades at the most lucrative strike price offered. It also allows the trading process to be kept as semi-automatic as well as completely in automatic mode which can be extremely helpful, especially for the beginners in trading who have very little information regarding the niche.

It also mentions that since the program for this software was established by the creative minds of the industry as well as neutral specialists, it covers all the aspects of successful binary trading along with being user-friendly.

?Though the creators are not claiming a 100% accuracy rate, they do mention that the software has an accuracy rate ranging between 70-80%,? writes the review. Made available for free, centunum auto trading software is getting huge attention. With the review presenting complete details of the software, users can easily get a glimpse of what this auto software has to offer.
