Local SEO Profit, a digital marketing agency in San Diego, CA, has recently launched their brand new website. Their focus is specifically on the restaurant business and they are currently looking for clients in that sector who want to increase their online exposure. One of the key tools they use to achieve this is a press release service. Roderick Luna from Local SEO Profit says: "Press releases are a fantastic way to get a buzz going about local restaurants. They are very SEO friendly and the search engines love them. Not just that, clients love them as well. They like to hear that there is something new or special about a restaurant they are considering going to. We offer a full press release service to restaurant businesses and encourage all to contact us." The business enables restaurants to announce and share their most important developments with the online world. In today's world, digital marketing and promotion are incredibly powerful and relevant. They enable companies to target specific audiences and are particularly powerful for localized SEO. Through press releases, restaurants are able to connect directly with their audience, be they in the same geographical location or on opposite sides of the world. Local SEO Profit is likely to start targeting other industries very soon as well. However, presently, they want to build a network of restaurant owners. This is in part also because restaurants are so vital to the local economy, something they actively wish to support. "Restaurants do more for the local economy than any other type of business," adds Roderick Luna. "They employ local people, source local ingredients and encourage people from both the local area and further afield to come into the community. We believe they are the ones that, at times, keep communities going. After all, on top of all that, they provide food, an essential substance of life. This is why we have decided to start our focus with this vital service." Restaurant owners are encouraged to contact Local SEO Profit as soon as possible to get started and increase their online exposure through the medium of press releases. ###
