April 25, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Avasia, a business in Beaverton, OR, that provides prenatal supplements is looking for book reviewers. The company is well known for its prenatal products but what sets it apart from others is that it also offers advice and tips to expectant mothers. They have recently relaunched the company website, and it now includes a section on reviews of books for expectant and new mothers. To celebrate, the company has also started a competition. Those who subscribe to the website and send an original book review will have a chance of having the review published on the website. Additionally, the winner will receive Avasia products for their own use, completely free, for a full year. The competition runs on a monthly basis. Full details are available through www.avasia.com.

Natasha Avasia, spokesperson for the company, says: "Our goal is to be a community more than anything. We want to make sure that expectant mothers enjoy those nine special months as much as possible, and we want to give babies the best start in life. We believe that much of this is achieved by sharing information, and we know that our followers are a true wealth of information. Those who are happy to share that information with us have a chance of being rewarded for doing so."

The winners of the monthly competition will have their reviews posted on the website's specifically designed section. This can be accessed through www.avasia.com/book-reviews. The company has already posted a number of reviews on the site to give people a taste of the types of books they are looking for. These are all pregnancy, birth and parenting related.

Avasia recognizes that there are thousands of books out there on these subjects, some which are fantastic and others that were perhaps not even suitable for publishing. They hope that, through the review section on their website, expectant mothers will be able to find the books that are most suitable to their personal needs. In so doing, they will no longer have to spend their nine months of pregnancy reading every publication that is out there.

Avasia also shares information through their Twitter account on <https://twitter.com/AvasiaPrenatal> and encourages everyone to follow them.
