January 30, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Having worked in New Orleans as a family business for the past three generations, S&S Movers is renowned in the city. The company predicts the coming summer to be one of the busiest moving seasons the city has ever seen.

After the hurricane Katrina, it has almost taken New Orleans a decade to get back to where it was. However, statistics state that the population of the city is increasing at a very fast rate while the city is still not ready to cope with the population. According to S&S Movers, also known as the S&S Moving Company, almost all moving companies went out of business and a very few relocated after the hurricane Katrina.

For what is stated to be the fastest growing city in America, New Orleans is predicted to have a heavy moving season during summer 2016, and S&S Movers have been preparing for the 2016 summer moving frenzy. After being in the area as a family moving company for the past three generations, the company claims to really know the needs of New Orleans residents when it comes to moving. The S&S Movers spokesperson made an official statement with the press in which he discussed the company's past work and their preparation for the coming moving season.

"Here at S&S Movers, we have managed to keep our business within the city even when many moving companies went out of business after the hurricane Katrina," stated a company spokesperson.

He further added, "Since New Orleans has now become population-wise one of the fastest growing cities in America, a very busy moving season is predicted for summer 2016. Here at S&S Movers, we know what it takes to give our clients the best service and turn the moving in to a fun experience for them. We offer an array of proficient services for summer 2016, ranging from packing and wrapping to long distance moving."
