February 08, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Cujo Control, a business in Fairfield, NJ, has announced that they have recently re-launched their bark collar. They have also improved it by including an extra backup battery. The dog bark collar has already proven to be very popular and it is expected that, with the new improvements, it will soon become a bestselling item.

Jeremy Arteago from Cujo Control says: "When we first launched our bark collar, it quickly became very popular. It was so popular, in fact, that it sold out. We always listen to our customers, and many were telling us that it was very annoying that the bark collar would be out of use while they recharged the battery. Hence, we decided that, before upping our stock, we would improve it by adding a backup battery. We're happy to see that clients are already responding positively to this."

Dogs are known to bark excessively, particularly when they are unattended. This bark collar uses non-painful beep and static correction. If the dog barks, a static shock will be emitted, encouraging the dog to stop barking altogether. This is all done hands free, which means it is perfect when dog owners are out of the house as well.

In addition, even when the dog is attended to, the dog bark collar has been shown to prevent aggression with other animals. It is suitable for small and big dogs alike, encouraging all of them to stop barking, even in the presence of other dogs. This makes for a much more pleasant walking experience, too.

Those who have tried the collar have been overwhelmingly positive about its effectiveness. "My dog barks... More than I actually care to hear," says Aubree. "He's a good dog just apparently has a lot to say about anything and everything. When I'm trying to sleep or the baby is trying to sleep this can be a bit of an issue so I needed something to remind him he doesn't always have to be barking. when I first put the collar on he first thought he wasn't able to move and just laid down for awhile, then he tried to eat it while he was wearing it, then he forgot it was on and life went on as normal. Then the barking started. The collar has a warning beep before the zap comes, I have the collar on one of the lowest settings because I don't think being zapped would be enjoyable considering how much he barks to begin with. Not to mention he's not the smartest dog in the world. You can adjust the posts for your dogs fur level, same goes for the collar, and there is also a current tester included. The dial is easy to adjust so if you're like me and feel bad zapping your pooch you can turn the level basically off but still see the results."
