SoulsticeWellness.com has been working diligently to increase awareness about their specialized Peri-operative Therapy treatment and how their services help people recover faster and more efficiently following surgical procedures. Recently, they made an official announcement about their new service, "Massage for Pain Reduction Denver" that has made a significant impact in the pain reduction industry.

Soulstice has been collecting client testimonials for those they've helped living with high levels of chronic pain. The therapies that they offer are not only for individuals who were recently injured, but also for those individuals who experience on-going pain.

The kind of Massage for Pain Reduction Denver therapy used by the experts over at Soulstice has demonstrated a huge decrease in the anxiety levels of their patients. High anxiety is one of the conditions that may postpone other medical intervention. This encouraged founders of the therapy service center, Ann Brooks and Kent Lemburg, to put together their expertise and commitment to accelerate the recuperation process for each of their patients.

As a result, patients who receive medical massage therapy will benefit from the release of endorphins (the body's own pain killer) to relax and heal faster with more efficiency. Soulstice focuses on decreasing anxiety to open up prompt and positive results.

According to S. Armstrong from Centennial, CO, "Soulstice was instrumental in the healing process before and after my knee replacement surgery. The staff's expertise and caring attitude encouraged me through difficult times. Now, five months later, I look forward to continuing my massages for relaxation and distressing. Owners, Kent Lemburg and Ann Brooks, deserve kudos for their management of an A+ organization."

Offering up different kinds of techniques in addition to Massage for Pain Reduction, please give Soulstice a call with any questions that you may have. Their practice is located near Swedish Hospital.
