April 16, 2015 -

Peter K. Lee, DDS, who is a Dentist in Willow Glen, a highly desirable neighborhood of San Jose, is now offering the Pinhole Surgical Technique (PST), which is a minimally invasive method of gum grafting. As a general family dentist, treating people of all ages, Dr. Peter Lee has always strived to make use of new dentistry techniques and other advancements. He hopes that by offering PST, more people will feel comfortable about looking after their dental hygiene and overall oral health.

"I have a reputation of being the best dentist in San Jose, and I am incredibly proud of that," says Dr. Peter K. Lee, DDS. "In order to be deserving of that reputation, I feel it is my duty to always be up to date with the latest technological advances in the field of dentistry, so I can offer the best possible service to my patients with minimal discomfort. I urge those who want more information on this technique to contact us today."

PST is a technique that was invented and patented by Dr. John Chao, DDS. It is used to stop and correct gum recession, without requiring scalpels or sutures. Rather, a special type of instrument is used in order to loosen the gum where it is receding before gliding it back to where it needs to be. It offers instant cosmetic improvement and, since there is no cutting involved, there are also minimal recovery symptoms. Most patients will not experience any bleeding, pain or swelling after PST.

As a dentist in Willow Glen, Dr. Lee treats a huge variety of patients, coming from different ages and different ethnic, social and economic backgrounds. His goal is to make sure that everybody feels comfortable coming to him with their dental needs, and his reviews show that he is succeeding in this.

"Dr. Lee and his staff are great. I have never been given a tour of a dentist's office before and that is the first thing they do here. Everyone is extremely friendly and I recommend using Dr. Lee," says patient Roger H from San Jose. "I have been to a few different dentists in my life and I don't plan on switching anytime soon."

Dr. Lee's services are extensive. He offers only the safest kind of digital imaging, including digital x-rays with very low levels of radiation. Additionally, he offers oral cancer screening and the results of this are available almost instantly. Other general services include dental examinations, CEREC restorations, teeth cleaning, white fillings, dental crowns (including porcelain), dental bridges, full and partial dentures, oral DNA testing, endodontics, oral surgery, TMJ treatment, sleep dentistry, and bad breath and gum disease treatment.

Those who require further information about the new PST service or any other services offered by Dr. Peter K. Lee, can contact us today. Dr Lee and his staff are always ready to answer questions or to give a tour of their facility and further information about the different treatment options they offer.
