June 23, 2025

JOHNSON CITY, TN - June 23, 2025 -
Dragonfly Medical and Behavioral Health in Johnson City, Tennessee, is expanding its healthcare offerings to put more focus on mental health services. They're stepping up to meet the growing demand for mental health support in their community. With this expansion, Dragonfly is introducing more therapy options and different kinds of support, showing their dedication to providing well-rounded and accessible care for their patients.

The clinic provides a variety of services that tackle both mental health and substance abuse issues. Dragonfly Medical Clinic is all about making sure people have access to necessary health resources. Their new therapy approaches target conditions like anxiety, depression, and post-traumatic stress disorder, aligning with their mission to offer personalized mental health care to enhance each patient's overall well-being.

To bring about these changes, Dragonfly Medical and Behavioral Health is incorporating new treatment methods into their existing programs. This growth is in line with their reputable alcohol rehab services, a long-standing part of their treatment offerings. The clinic's Director emphasizes how important this move is. "Our initiative to expand mental health services highlights our ongoing commitment to delivering personalized and comprehensive care. Our team is eager to provide even more support to those navigating complex mental health challenges," Brent stated.

Furthermore, Dragonfly is expanding its telehealth services. This ensures patients can stay in touch with their healthcare providers, especially if getting to the clinic in person is difficult. Telehealth is becoming a vital part of today's healthcare, and Dragonfly is investing in new technology to make the patient experience even better.

Dragonfly Medical Clinic has long been providing substance abuse treatment, including medically supervised detox and support groups. By expanding their mental health services, they aim to seamlessly integrate treatment options for their patients. Martin Ford, a counselor at the clinic, expressed his views on the expansion: "By incorporating new mental health therapies into our treatment regimens, we're breaking down walls that might prevent our patients from achieving full recovery and well-being."

Their mental health services now feature cognitive-behavioral therapy, group counseling, and dual diagnosis counseling. These programs help individuals learn about and manage their mental health conditions while providing a supportive space to share and gain insight from others.

Dragonfly Medical and Behavioral Health is setting a new standard for accessible healthcare. They offer a variety of payment options and help with insurance matters, easing the financial burdens that often stop people from seeking needed care.

As healthcare needs evolve, Dragonfly Medical and Behavioral Health is staying responsive. They plan to further expand by investing in community outreach and building partnerships with local organizations to broaden the reach and impact of their services.

Located at 102 N. Broadway St, Dragonfly Medical and Behavioral Health offers flexible service schedules to fit the varied needs of their patients, including those with non-traditional working hours.

This expansion is aimed at boosting the health and wellness of people in Johnson City and its nearby areas.
