Los Angeles, CA business Essential Oil Labs is drawing particular attention to their essential oil that has been obtained from lemons because it has been found that it may help people drink more water by just adding a few drops of it to a glass of water. This is in line with the company's commitment to improving the overall health of clients. To achieve this goal, they have released a number of multi-functional, 100% organic oils and are highlighting their various benefits.

Quinton Jeffries from Essential Oil Labs says: "A key to better health is better hydration. We all know that we should drink enough water each day, but most of us never achieve that because, let's face it, water is quite boring. Now, with just a few drops of our lemon essential oil, it can become a drink with a lovely taste to it. Thus, it may help people get more hydrated, as well as become healthier overall."

The Essential Oil Labs lemon essential oil comes in an extra large, four ounce bottle. The oil is responsibly sourced from organic farms in Italy, and the company guarantees its quality. They also highlight the fact that it is highly multi-functional, providing potential benefits for hydration and skin. Additionally, it can be used as a home cleaning product.

The oil has been very positively received by many people. "I love lemons, the taste, and the smell, so this is a wonderful product for me," says Sharon A. "This is a therapeutic grade, so it can be ingested as well as all the other uses you may find for it, and there are many. Lemon oil is very versatile, but remember, a little goes a long way, it's very concentrated."

On the Essential Oil Labs Facebook page, further information has been included about the various uses of the product. Additionally, they have shared information on the importance of hydration and tips on how to use the oil to improve on this. They encourage everyone to follow their Facebook page not just to remain up to date with news and developments, but also to communicate directly with the company and share their own tips on how to use the essential oil.
