Minden, NV - The Real Diaper Association is an association that encourages and educates people on the benefits of cloth diapering. It is a national organization that is looking for new members to help them spread the word on using cloth diapers instead of disposable diapers.

On their website, The Real Diaper Association is trying to create a "cultural shift" towards cloth diapers. They go on to state "cultural shifts happen when people everywhere decide it is time to initiate change, then they create the atmosphere for change to happen" hence the call for new advocates.

The benefits of cloth diapering focuses on the 3 R's ? Renewable, Reusable, Recyclable. The site has resources such as user guides, local resources, cloth diapers in daycare, volunteer opportunities and more.

The Real Diaper Association states that "many parents do not know about today's cloth diapers, or have access to them. It is our goal to make cloth diapers accessible to all US Parents".

Fortunately, there are many places online that parents can get cloth diapers, one of the most common online platforms is Amazon.com. On Amazon, there are many different options. One of the things to look for when purchasing reusable cloth diapers is to make sure that they are adjustable as your baby grows. Many of the new designs have snaps that can easily adjust for the size of the baby.

Another great feature to look for are "inserts". These inserts can be easily removed and washed to keep the longevity of the diapers.

"I've used other cloth diapers before, but I love these, mostly because of the snaps that can be adjusted, so I didn't have to worry about the size. The bamboo inserts are also great and really easy to wash and reuse." Said Jennifer, a happy customer of Bambungle Eco-Friendly reusable pocket diapers, a top retailer on Amazon.

Simply Babies Online features Bambungle Eco-Friendly reusable pocket diapers on Amazon.com. Each diaper comes with one pocket diaper and two bamboo inserts.
