June 13, 2025

Zürich, ZH - June 13, 2025 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Happy Pot GmbH has just rolled out a new donation platform in Switzerland. This platform offers individuals, charities, and organizations a fresh, hassle-free way to handle online fundraising. It simplifies the process without any upfront costs, allowing users to start secure, anonymous, and compliant fundraising campaigns. With an emphasis on privacy and support in multiple languages, Happy Pot GmbH aims to change how fundraising is done in Switzerland. More details about starting one's own fundraising pot are available on the company website.

The idea behind Happy Pot is to make fundraising easy and quick. With this platform, starting a fundraising campaign can happen in just a few minutes. It includes features like secure payment options, anonymous donation capabilities, and protected fundraising tools, all designed to make the experience smooth and worry-free. By partnering with well-known companies like Stripe, they focus on keeping users' funds safe and secure. Users can read more about their services, including how to set up a pot and ensure secure, anonymous donations, directly on their platform.

For those curious about the cost structure of Happy Pot, their website provides all the details one might need. Visit <https://happypot.ch/en/price> to see that there are no typical setup fees involved. The only charge is a 4.5% commission on successful transfer requests. This means there's no monthly fee, which makes it an attractive option for those who prefer efficient and budget-friendly fundraising.

The platform comes in multiple languages, including English, French, German, and Italian, making it accessible to a wide range of people across Switzerland. This multilingual support shows Happy Pot's dedication to designing a system that's easy for users of different language backgrounds to use.

"We're changing how Switzerland thinks about online fundraising by removing financial hurdles and ensuring full compliance with local laws," says Habiba Alami, the Founder of Happy Pot GmbH. This strategy helps the company stand out because, unlike many others, they charge users only when they actually raise money. This approach creates a supportive, low-risk environment for those organizing fundraisers.

This new platform is launching just as online fundraising needs to adapt to meet the changing needs of its users. Both organizations and individuals looking for a dependable, low-cost fundraising tool will find Happy Pot's services valuable. The ability to accept anonymous donations is another strength, as it respects donors' privacy while building trust and transparency between the fundraiser and supporters.

Beyond traditional fundraising, the platform is versatile enough to be used for various events, from birthday parties to community projects. This flexibility highlights its ability to support both small personal efforts and larger charitable campaigns.

"Conventional platforms make you pay before you even begin. We think you should only pay when you're successful," Alami stresses. This viewpoint underscores Happy Pot's mission to create a scenario where every user can fundraise efficiently without the burden of initial financial barriers.

As Happy Pot grows and adds more features, its focus is on improving user experiences and increasing engagement within the Swiss community. Its commitment to user security and privacy positions Happy Pot as a leading choice for donation tools among Swiss fundraisers.

Looking ahead, the platform plans to keep enhancing its technology to meet the shifting needs of the fundraising sector. By doing so, Happy Pot remains a top player in innovation, making a strong contribution to the Swiss tech scene.
